River City Council Observed Of All In Parade on Saturday

MEMBERS AT DANCE HAD BIG TIME

Cincinnati, O., July 11. (Special.)—The Portsmouth delegation to the United Commercial Travelers convention experts to take home tonight the prize for the best showing in the parade which took place this afternoon.

What the Portsmouth travelers wore in the parade was a secret to all the other delegations, but here it is: Flaming red duster with large yellow buttons; jockey caps with the colors of the order; umbrellas to match and grips with the word "Portsmouth" painted on them. There is no doubt that Portsmouth was both seen and heard in the parade. In addition there was the peerless Portsmouth band.

The Portsmouth travelers got into their parade uniforms this morning to be photographed by the newspapers and members of other delegations who got a peep at their red outfits became green with envy.

Zanesville captured the next convention, but Portsmouth is getting all the admiration. The River City band has been traveling about the city serenading everybody. Friday it serenaded the newspapers. Saturday morning it rested for the great effort it was to put forth in the afternoon.

"We have all had a good time" said H. S. Grimes, president of the Portsmouth Board of Trade.

The delegation was a little late getting up this morning after the grand ball at the Armory Friday night. Four thousand persons took part in the grand march, the most inspiring dance spectacle ever seen in Cincinnati. Every one of the Portsmouth crowd marched. Two bands played. Grand Councilor Whitaker led the parade. The march started in double file and ended with the marchers stamping down the hall 42 abreast and with arms locked. The march was followed by dancing that lasted long after midnight.

Most of the delegation is quartered at the Burnet House. Each man in it is boosting Portsmouth while having a good time. They take Cincinnatians and others aside, buttonhole them and make them listen to what Portsmouth has. All of Cincinnati will find out on next August when the Ohio Valley Exposition opens. Friday President Grimes of the Board of Trade, John E. Williams, vice president of the Ohio Valley Improvement Association and F. M. Bangs, secretary of the Manufacturers Association, called on the directors of the exposition and made arrangements for more space for the Portsmouth exhibit. They said they had not been allotted enough space for the things that Portsmouth has to show and then they gave a glowing account of how great a town Portsmouth really is. Portsmouth as a result will not only get much more space but a first class position.

"We have 68 different industries in Portsmouth" said the man filing they picture of Portsmouth's wonderful growth before the eyes of the directors. "These will all be represented at the exposition. We will illuminate our section of the exhibition with electricity made by a plant built entirely in Portsmouth. We will show the people of the Ohio Valley what grade of paving brick we have in our city, and the shoes we make. And do you know that we make the best kind of non-explosive gas stoves in our town.

"Our manufacturers intend to have actual demonstrations of how they make these things. We will have shoes actually at work sweat-leather, stitching machines, a shoe lace machine and other industries of which we are justly proud. The Ohio Valley will wake up to the wonders of Portsmouth when it comes to the exposition. We realize that the exposition will do us a great deal of good."

GO TO BEVERLEY MONTH EARLIER

(By United Press.)

Beverly, Mass., June 11.—President Taft's staff of executive officers will arrive here between July first and fifteenth, a month earlier than last year. Secretary Norton has written here to that effect and work on the offices will commence at once.

To Control Issues Of Stock

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, June 11.—As a result of Taft's insistence that the new railroad bill should include some provision looking to the control of new issues of stocks and bonds by railroad companies, it was decided at a White House conference today that a paragraph shall be added to the bill providing for a commission to investigate and report at the next session of congress the best means of dealing with this situation.

Those present at the conference were Speaker Cannon, Senators Elkins and Aldrich, Representative Mann of conferes, and Attorney General Wickersham.

Swindler Caught

(By United Press.)

Rochester, Minn., June 11.—H. G. Mason, alias Jay Rice, is being held here today for the Dayton, O., police. He is charged with swindling a Philadelphia merchant out of $15,000 in a mining deal in Dayton last October. A Pinkerton circular led to his arrest by Customs Collector Roth.

"MEMORIES"

HUSBAND ACCUSED IN TRUNK MYSTERY

(By United Press.)

Como, Italy, June 11.—The whole of Italy is being searched and the seas are being blown with wireless messages today in an effort to apprehend Porter Charlton of Washington, youthful husband of the woman whose mutilated body was found in a trunk in Lake Como yesterday. The police have abandoned the theory that Charlton was slain.

Constantine Ismolatoff, the Russian, who is being held in connection with the crime, has thrown no light on the situation. Police are trying to connect this murder with that of Miss Stella Reed of New York, whose body was recently found on the beach at Naples.

The proprietor of the hotel where the Charltons stopped before going to their cottage on the lake, told police that the couple were expelled from the hotel because of their repeated quarrels.

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, June 11.—Paul Charlton, father-in-law of Mrs. Mary Scott Castle Charlton, whose body was found in a trunk in Lake Como, Italy, suspects one of her former admirers to be at the bottom of the tragedy. He believed his son, Paul, husband of the woman, is also dead. Last letter received from Paul by his father was cheerful.

At the request of Judge Charlton the state department cabled a representative in Italy to make an investigation of the murder mystery and try to learn the whereabouts of Porter Charlton.

Allen Wants to Know.

Marion, O., June 11.—Bondsmen of township land assessors, all of whom have refused to appraise property at its full value in money, may be called upon to pay the cost of a reappraisement. Today County Auditor Allen wrote Attorney General Denman as to the liability of the fifty or more bondsmen in Marion county.

ROOSEVELT IS RESPONSIBLE FOR HARDINGE

(By United Press.)

London, Eng., June 11.—English politicians today claim Roosevelt's influence is responsible for the appointment of Sir Charles Hardinge to succeed the Earl of Minto as viceroy of India. It is said the government decided to adopt a more repressive rule in India following Col. Roosevelt's Guild Hall speech. Hardinge is an advocate of force. Lord Kitchener favored his appointment.

LEGAL FIGHT OVER $7

(By United Press.)

Columbus, O., June 11.—A legal fight over $7 got into the supreme court. The costs already amount to $300. The $7 is a bill which Cole, Crane & Company of Cincinnati, refused to pay to W. S. C. Beatty, who raised seven logs which sank in the Ohio river for the Cole, Crane Co. Beatty has received judgment in both the common pleas and lower courts.

23 Perished In Fire At Seattle Early Saturday

(By United Press.)

Seattle, Wash., June 11—Twenty-three persons are believed to dead and property worth one million dollars destroyed as the result of a fire which broke out on the north water front during a hurricane in the heart of the city today.

It started shortly after midnight in the Galburth warehouse. A westerly gale carried the blaze eastward which is thickly covered by wooden buildings and in a short time 20 acres were ablaze.

A row of wooden houses caught and a squad of police ran ahead of the flames warning the occupants. They were unable to reach one house where 20 are believed to have perished.

Three firemen who abandoned their engines when surrounded by fire took refuge in a building which later collapsed. They were killed.

Patients of the Pacific hospital near the firswept district were removed to safely.

Five hundred were rendered homeless.

(By United Press.)

Seattle, Wash., June 11.—Between 50 and 75 persons are now missing following the fire which wiped out six square blocks of buildings. It is believed, however, that few of them except the three firemen were killed.

Postpone Trial

(By United Press.)

Hopkinsville, Ky., June 11.—Judge Lambert ordered a continuance of the night rider trials which were to open today, until September 7th. This was to give Milton Oliver, star witness, a chance to recover from a recent wound supposedly inflicted by night riders. The postponement relieved the situation here as feeling ran high.

A large crowd had gathered for the trial and every spectator was searched.

REMOVE BODIES FROM A SUNKEN SUBMARINE

(By United Press.)

Paris, France, June 11.—The removal of the bodies from the ill-fated submarine Pluviuse began today in the Calais harbor. Relatives of the dead gathered at the dock and a guard was necessary to keep them back while the coffin was being opened. The crowd was enraged at the commercial attitude of some who tried to take moving pictures. craft struck.

Many of the photographers were beaten and their machines mashed. The doctors claimed many of the victims died from suffocation having been alive for 24 hours after the boat sank.

The manner of the sinking of the submarine was revealed when the superstructure emerged at low tide. A rent fifty feet long and two feet wide is in the stern of the boat where the submerged

TAFT GOES AFTER THE STOCK YARDS

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, June 11.—On application of Attorney General Wickersham, William S. Kenyon, assistant to the attorney general, is expected to file today in the United States circuit court at Chicago a bill in equity against certain Chicago stock yard companies for alleged rebating on freight charges.

The bill is directed against the Union Stock Yards and Transit Company, Chicago Junction Railway Co., Chicago Junction Railways, Union Stock Yards, Louis Pfaelzer and Sons. It is alleged in the bill the tracks of the Chicago Junction Railway Co.'s, is controlled by corporations subsidiary to the Union Stock Yards Co., the railways company handles all incoming and outgoing stock for the Union Stock Yards at Chicago and serves 620 industries in and about the Stock Yards.

It is alleged the railway company receives from the trunk lines pay for this service, yet no tariff has been filed by the Junction company with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Lawler May Now Be Asked To Explain

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 11.—Oscar Lawler may be asked to appear before the rules committee to tell upon what authority he sent Mexican political refugees to prison when he was United States attorney for Southern California. Champ Clark, minority leader, proposed calling Lawler today when John K. Turner, author of "Barbarous Mexico," told the committee of the treatment of Mexicans in the United States.

Turner charged that United States secret service men, marshals of federal court, United States army officers and police were involved with Mexican agents to suppress the liberal political movement of Mexicans in the United States.

Deferred Sentence

(By Associated Press.)

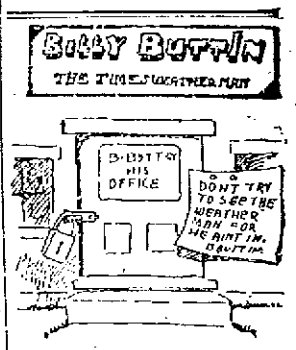

New York, June 11.—The sentence of Charles R. Heike and E. W. Gerbracht, was suspended until August 30, pending appeal which counsel for defendant will file.

James F. Halligan, checker and Harry W. Walker, assistant dock superintendent who pleaded guilty during the recent trial were sentenced to three months each. James F. Bendernagel whose case jury could not agree was paroled on his own recognizance. It is considered doubtful if his case will be further prosecuted. The bail of Heike and Gerbracht was fixed at $25,000 each.

Garfield Willing

(By United Press.)

St. Paul, Minn., June 11.—James R. Garfield accompanied Gifford Pinchot to St. Paul and they visited Gov. Eberhart today. The three discussed the possibility of Garfield as a candidate for governor of Ohio. Garfield gave the impression that he would accept the candidacy if the party needed him.

See that sign on my door? Then you're jerry. I'm not "in" so don't waste your time for I won't open th' door. I met up with Pete Childs last night and he wised me on what I was due to get if I didn't back pedal on this wet weather. As th' dope was already out for today there was nothin' to do but "lay dead" and hunt up the jolly stuff for tomorrow. I don't know how it will suit th' crowd but here it is:

Ohio—Unsettled with showers in East portion tonight; Sunday partly cloudy, warmer.

West Va.—Showers tonight or Sunday, cooler.

Indiana—Fair tonight and Sunday.

MRS. FORD IS NOT INSANE, LUNACY CASE DISMISSED

Cincinnati, O., June 11.— Mrs. Jeanette Stewart Ford was not committed to Longview yesterday. Neither was she adjudged insane, but on the contrary the warrant against her was dismissed by Probate Judge Leuders. Instead of sending her to an asylum or sanitarium it was agreed that Mrs. Ford be placed in the Bethesda Hospital under the care of Dr. Ralph Reed, an alienist, who will treat her for the nervous condition in which her troubles have left her.

The decision came yesterday after a rather stormy time, during which Mrs. Ford was examined in the City Hospital by Drs. W. L. Davis and W. C. Kendig, the Probate court's insanity experts.

Dr. Herman Hoppe, head of the department for nervous troubles in the City Hospital, started the ball rolling when he denounced the proceedings of examining Mrs. Ford at the hospital. Then Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Artuhr C. Fricke appeared on the scene and declared that Mrs. Ford was being "railroaded" to Longview, and that such a proceeding would materially affect the state's case against Edgar Street Cooke, indicted on a charge of securing money from Charles L. Warriner, which the latter stole from the Big Four Railroad while treasurer, and in which case Mrs. Ford is wanted as a material witness.

Due To Bad Weather.

Probate Judge Lueders denied that there was any attempt to rush or railroad matters, and that it was the inclement weather which prevented Mrs. Ford being taken to the Probate court, wherefore, it was decided to examine her at the hospital. The examination was made and the party then returned to the court house, where the testimony of the witnesses was taken.

At the conclusion of this Judge Leuders declared that the woman was not insane and he would dismiss the case, but a request was made that it be continued until some arrangements could be made. Judge Leuders then suggested that Attorney William Thorndyke representing Mrs. Ford, and Assistant Prosecutor Fricke confer and agree upon something. Attorney Thorndyke refused to confer alone with Prosecutor Hunt, after Judge Leuders had suggested this.

Finally it was agreed that Mrs. Ford should be placed under the medical care of Dr. Ralph Reed, who will take personal charge of her case. Dr. Reed and the other physicians are practically agreed that Mrs. Ford's only trouble is nervousness, and that she is in no wise insane, but is in a highly nervous, unstrung condition. It is believed that a few days' rest will bring her around all right.

Prosecutor's Statement.

After the matter had been settled Prosecutor Hunt said:

"Our idea is purely one of humanity. The woman is in a serious physical condition. I never did think her insane, but her condition was such that to further prosecute her would be persecution, therefore, I asked that the indictments against her be nolled. What I do want is to see that the woman is restrained to the extent that she does not leave the jurisdiction of this court until after the Cooke case has been tried. The woman may be an important witness for us, and if so we have worked too hard on the case to wish to have it spoiled now, as it might be if she were insane, or if she got away from our jurisdiction."

During her examination at the City Hospital for an hour Mrs. Ford was put through a thorough grilling. At times her answers were intelligent and coherent and throughout she displayed a wonderful memory. Then, again, she became wild and rambling, wailing against her supposed prosecutors. She declared that her room was wired so that her enemies might read her innermost thoughts and that men were erecting her gallows on the canal bank. The dramatic intensity of the scene was emphasized by the doleful surroundings and the central figure, who in the zenith of her voluptuous career was a handsome woman, whose hand and foot would have served as models for a sculptor.

A Sorry Figure.

With her hair hanging in disheveled strands, her eyes cold and lusterless, her cheecks wan and without color, and dressed in the cheap habilaments of a charity hospital patient, she presented a sorry figure indeed. The room which she has occupied since her return to the hospital, at the end of the strong ward, where dissolute females are incarcerated, gave the fitting background. Adjoining it was another room occupied by a colored woman suffering from erysipelas, and her cries often disturbed the proceedings.

At 4 o'clock p. m. Attorney Thorndyke, Dr. Ralph Reed and Assistant Prosecutor Fricke again appeared at the hospital to remove Mrs. Ford to her new asylum. When informed of their errand the woman again became hysterical, but finally permitted the nurses to dress her. When she reached the receiving ward she seemed to realize that further resistance was useless and became quite docile. The automobile ambulance was in waiting, Clerk Hossler accompanying the party, to be at hand in case of an emergency. The journey was made without incident, however, and in less than a half hour Mrs. Ford was within the quiet confines of Bethesda Hospital, where Dr. Reed will attend her.

COOKE'S MOVEMENTS.

With Mrs. Ford in New York Said To Have Been Traced by Fricke.

It leaked out yesterday that Assistant County Prosecutor Fricke, on his recent visit to New York, succeeded in locating important witnesses whom he will produce at the trial of Edgar Street Cooke.

During his trial Warriner charged that Cooke was short $22,000 about 1902 or 1903. It was rumored at the time that Cooke had the money "planted" among friends in Delhi. Warriner claimed that when he charged Cooke with having taken the money the latter admitted it, and offered to replace it. Thereupon Cooke left for New York, and it is said that he was accompanied by Mrs. Ford.

It is said that it was Mr. Fricke's mission to trace Cooke's movement after reaching New York at that time. It is understood that he discovered that Cooke invested about $12,000 with a New York brokerage firm: $4,000 in starting up a butcher shop and $3,000 in starting up a hat store.

SCRATCHED SO SHE COULD NOT SLEEP

Child of Two had Masses of Eczema Over Face, Head and Body—They Took Her to the Best Doctors and Tried Salves and Medicines in Vain—Suffered for Five Years.

SOON RELIEVED AND CURED BY CUTICURA

"I write to tell you how thankful I am for the wonderful Cuticura Remedies. My little niece had eczema for five years and when her mother died I took care of the child. It was all over her face and body, also on her head. She scratched so that she could not sleep nights. I used Cuticura Soap to wash her with and then applied Cuticura Ointment. I did not use quite half the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, together with Cuticura Resolvent, when you could see a change and they cured her nicely. Now she is eleven years old and has never been bothered with eczema since. My friends think it is just great the way the baby was cured by Cuticura. I send you a picture taken when she was about eighteen months old.

"She was taken with the eczema when two years old. She was covered with big sores and her mother had all the best doctors and tried all kinds of salves and medicines without effect until we used Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. H. Kiernan, 663 Quincy St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 27, 1909."

For thirty years Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have afforded speedy relief to tens of thousands of skin-tortured and disfigured sufferers from eczemas, rashes, itchings, irritations and chafings, from infancy to age, bringing comfort and peace to distracted households when all else failed. Guaranteed absolutely pure and may be used from the hour of birth.

Cuticura Soap (25c.), Cuticura Ointment (50c.) and Cuticura Resolvent (50c.), or in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60). Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., 135 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass. 32-page Cuticura Booklet, an Authority on Affections of the Skin, Scalp and Hair.

MISS PHILLIDA TERSON.

When Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree revived Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" in London during the present spring special interest was aroused from the fact that two characters in the play, Viola and her brother Sebastian, whose likeness to one another is so essential a part of the comedy, were played by Mr. Fred Terry's and Mr. Fred Terry himself, respectively.

The young woman, who thus attracted considerable attention and who acquitted herself worthily, has a rich heritage which should make her a notable addition to the stage. Both her parents are well known players. Her father is a member of the famous Terry family, and little Miss Terson, although she may seek to disguise the fact under a slightly altered stage name, is a niece of Ellen and Marion Terry and a member of a family whose connection with the stage is especially brilliant.

Miss Terson's father, Fred Terry, is the youngest of his branch of the family. Like his sisters, he made his debut on the stage at an early age, and has been actively connected with it ever since. It was in1880, at the age of fifteen, that he first walked on the boards, appearing at the Haymarket Theatre, London, during the regime of the Bancrofts.

Miss Terson's mother is also a distinguished member of the acting profession, where she is known by her maiden name, Miss Julia Neilson. She was appeared in a wide range of parts, principally of the romantic and poetic sort, and is said to have played Rosalind in Shakespeare's "As You Like It" in a production that holds the record for the longest run of the play in London.

MISS PHILLIDA TERSON.

Miss Terson inherits her mother's music ability, and it should be noted that Julia Neilson studied this art at the Royal Academy of Music, in London, where she won the Llewellyn Thomas gold metal, the Westmoreland scholarship and the Sainton Dolby prize. Miss Terson lives with her parents at Bedford Court Mansions and shares their love of cycling, yachting and other outdoor sports.

Miss Ellen Terry gives a brief account of her brother Fred and the other members of her immediate family when she writes in "The Story of My Life":—

"My mother had eleven children altogether, but only nine survived their infancy, and of these nine my eldest brother, Ben and my sister Florence have since died. My sister Kate, who left the stage at an age when most of the young women of the present day take to it for the first time, and made an enduring reputation in a few brilliant years, was the eldest of the family. Then came a sister, who died, and I was the third. After us came Ben, George, Marion, Flossie, Charles, Tom and Fred. Six out of nine have been on the stage, but only Marion, Fred and I are there still."

The Boss of the Establishment

He Is Amazed at the General Feminine Disregard for Truth.

BY AMERE MANN.

"What's the matter?" asked the Boss of the Establishment as the switching on of the electric light revealed an unwanted expression of pleading penitence on his wife's face.

"Um-m, nothing!" answered the lady, her looks belying the denial.

"Why—I thought you'd give me some more money, of course!" faltered his abashed spouse.

"Of course," snorted the Boss, "and that's what every woman thinks whose frivolity and extravagance lead her husband to the brink of ruin! The older I get the more I am amazed at the general feminine disregard of the obligations of truth and honor. Is there the woman on earth who doesn't look upon her husband's creditors—the butcher, the baker, the grocer, the landlord—as importunate nuisances to be satisfied with whatever she has left over from her mad pursuit of bargain sales? And then they consider it clever to deceive their husbands about the housekeeping bills!"

"I only wish I thought it clever," hotly retorted the Boss's wife. "Then at least I might have been spared this harangue."

FINALLY THE BOSS RESORTED TO USING CAJOLERY.

"Oh, yes, there is!" the Boss asserted. "you [illegible] it."

"I don't know what you're talking about," his wife [illegible], and then, after a moment's pause, she added: "Are you sure [illegible] if I [illegible]?"

"Sure," the Boss assured.

"You promise? We[illegible] you know that $20 you gave me to pay the telephone and [illegible] light bills —I didn't pay them. I [illegible] hats instead!"

"Two hats!" [illegible] Boss.

"Yes, two [illegible] you left this morning I [illegible] the morning paper [illegible] vertisement of [illegible] for less than a fourth of the regular price. It was way over in Brooklyn, but I [illegible] bought two of the [illegible] hats [illegible] ever saw! And they're [illegible] Don't you want to see them?"

"No," said the Boss [illegible] "I don't. I am much more interested in knowing what you intend to do about the telephone and electric light bills. How do you expect to pay them?"

H. M. Pyles, who disposed of his grocery at Huntington, is expected here with his family next Tuesday to make this city their future home.

SILKS AND SATINS SOLD BY UNCLE SAM

SEIZED GOWNS ON EXHIBITION.

Seven pretty young stenographers were enlisted in New York to aid Uncle Sam in disposing of all sorts of expensive feminine apparel brought in from Paris and other fashion centers. The goods were seized by the custom officials and declared forfeited for violation of the customs laws.

The girls were recruited from the offices of the United States District Attorney and Marshal Henkel. The sale took place on Friday morning, June 10, in the Custom House.

Marshal Henkel engineered the sale. Four trunk loads of the finest materials were sold. One of the trunks contained forty-nine princess gowns, another contained thirty lace waists, the third sixty-seven shirt waists, and the fourth twenty-one shirt waists.

It was a great time for women bargain hunters and the seven girls showing the goods did not let any likely purchasers get by them.

CHILD OVERCOME BY CHLOROFORM

Eleanor, ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Cundiff, 815 John street, came near dying Friday night as a result of breathing fumes of chloroform.

Mrs. Cundiff had borrowed a small bottle of chloroform from a neighbor to alleviate the pain of neuralgic toothache and after using some of it, placed the bottle in a cupboard. The little girl, who had watched her mother, slipped to the cupboard and securing the bottle, removed the cork and began smelling it. She kept this up for several minutes finally falling to the floor unconscious.

The little one was soon discovered by her mother and Dr. Fitch was hurriedly summoned. He worked with the patient some time before she regained consciousness. Eleanor was very sick all Friday night but was better Saturday.

Times Daily Recipes

Cream Puffs.

Put into a granite saucepan two cupfuls of warm water and a half pound of butter; stir until it comes to a slow boil; add gradually, stirring all the time, three-quarters of a pound of sifted flour and cook one moment; beat smooth and turn into a deep dish to cool; have ready six eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately, and whip into the cooled paste the whites last; drop in large spoonfuls on buttered paper and bake in a quick oven for ten minutes or until a golden brown.

Jellied Chicken.

For jellied chicken have on hand three pounds of chicken that has been boiled and cut from the bone in strips. Mix a quart of rich chicken stock that has been boiled down and cleared with a teaspoonful each of lemon juice, chopped parsley, a dash of celery salt and a quarter teaspoonful each of salt and paprika. At the last stir in a teaspoonful of granulated gelatine that has been dissolved. When the jelly begins to thicken add the chicken and turn it into a mould. To have the chicken scattered evenly through the jelly, stand the dish containing the jelly in a pan of ice and turn in the jelly layer by layer, covering each with chicken as soon as it begins to thicken.

Mr. Martin Linck and daughter, Miss Emma Linck, are expected home Saturday evening from Cincinnati, where they attended the U. C. T. convention and visited Mrs. Carrie Linck Kramer.

Prof. Enyart and sister, Miss Enyart, graduates of the O. W. U., will go to Delaware to attend commencement of the O. W. U. June the 15th, when their cousin will be one of the graduates.

Miss Norma Harck will sing a solo at Trinity church Sunday evening.

Mr. William Crichton has returned from a trip of six months from the Scott Knitting Co., and is guest of his mother, Mrs. William Gillett.

The Cincinnati Times-Star says that the engagement has been announced of Miss Nellie Voorheis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Voorheis to Mr. Davis James Davis, formerly of Louisville, Ky.

Miss Voorheis has many friends in Portsmouth where her father resided for many years.

Mrs. Earl Reed, of Hotel Grimes, entertained with a kensington in honor of her mother, Mrs. W. L. Walker, of Wheeling, W. Va., midst pretty decorations of tropical foliage and daisies. The guests were Mesdames G. D. Selby, P. E. Selby, Alfred Richardson, James Maxwell, James Patterson. Needlework was followed by a dainty repast prettily served by the hostess of the enjoyable occasion.

Transfer Shears

Work was commenced Friday evening at transferring shears from the old to the new blooming mill at the Steel plant.

The new bloomer with a capacity thrice as great as the old one is expected to be in operation within two weeks. With the additional cranes and stock shipping arrangements a force of men twice as large as the present one will be required to operate mill. New jobbing mills will be constructed on the site of the old bloomer.

HASKINS SUES FOR $10,000 DAMAGES

Judge W. D. James has filed a petition in common pleas court in which John M. Haskins, administrator ad litem of the estate of his eight-year-old son, William M. Haskins, deceased; is plaintiff and The Portsmouth Street Railway and Light Company is defendant.

The suit is to recover damages claimed to the amount of $10,000 for the death of the boy by being run over by a street car on April 21, 1910. The accident resulting in the boy's death happened on Eighth street on the evening of April 21 when the children were returning home from school.

The charges made in the petition are that the company did not exercise due diligence in operating the car, that the motorman was inexperienced and that the car should have been equipped with fenders.

Clay Is Bitter

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 11.—Senator Clay, Democrat, stated today that the administration has no idea of revising the tariff in a bitter speech in opposition to the proposed $250,000 appropriation for a tariff board. He said that the Republicans realized that they had to make an issue of the tariff in the coming campaign and were merely paving the way.

Robbed Of Witness

(By United Press.)

Cleveland, O., June 11.—Death robbed the prosecution in the Kohler case of one important witness when Fred R. Blee drove his auto through the gates of the Superior viaduct and was killed yesterday. Blee was to have testified to a number of joy rides on which he was Kohler's chauffeur.

MRS. FORD IS RECOVERING

Cincinnati, O., June 11.—(Special to Times)—Mrs. Jeannette Ford, "the woman in the Warriner case," who was removed from the Cincinnati hospital to the Bethesda hospital, Reading Road and Oak street, late Friday, is gradually recovering from the hysterical state, which caused her arrest on a lunacy warrant, Dr. Ralph Reed declared Saturday. "The noise aggravated Mrs. Ford's condition while she was at the Cincinnati hospital," Dr. Reed said, "now that she has been placed in a quiet place we expect rapid improvement in her condition."

Prosecutor Hunt, explaining his attitude in the Ford case, Says he does not want Mrs. Ford to leave the jurisdiction of Hamilton county court because it is likely she will be an important witness for the state in the prosecution of indictments against Edward Cook, a former employe of the Big Four.

ASK RECEIVER FOR WEBSTER BRICK CO.

Columbus, O., June 11.—Appointment of a receiver for the South Webster Brick company, which has a plant at South Webster, Scioto county, was asked yesterday by holders of first mortgage bonds after a cognovit judgment for $5093.70 had been taken against the company. The plaintiffs are Arlington C. Harvey and A. L. Fullerton.

Albert Lee Thurman, as trustee of $25,000 worth of bonds joined in the petition for a receiver. The company it is said, is laboring under severe financial strain. Interest on $5,000 worth of bonds was due June 1.

When the company defaulted in payment of interest the suit was brought.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

A LINIMENT FOR EXTERNAL USE.

Cheerfulness and a bright disposition during the months before baby comes, are among the greatest blessings a mother can bestow upon the little life about to begin. Her happiness and physical comfort will largely govern the proper development of the health and nature of the child. Mother's Friend contributes much to the mother's happiness and health by the relief and mental comfort it affords. It is a liniment composed of penetrating oils and medicines which lubricate the muscles and tendons of the body, soothe the swollen mammary glands, cause a gradual expansion of the skin and tissues, and aid in the relief of nausea. The regular use of Mother's Friend greatly lessens the pain and danger when baby comes, and assures a quick and natural recovery for the mother. Mother's Friend is sold at drug stores. # TRAIN HITS AUTO, CHILD WAS HURT

Charles Grassman's Buick automobile was hit by passenger train No. 25, on the Cincinnati division of the N. & W. at Thirteenth and Railroad streets, Saturday afternoon at 3:50 o'clock.

In the auto were the owner and driver, Charles Grassman, his daughter Helen aged 13 and his son George aged 11.

Helen Grassman was thrown out on her head and shoulders in a sand bank and was badly shaken up and bruised. It is not known how badly she was hurt but her injuries are not thought to be serious.

Mr. Grassman leaped before the train hit the auto and escaped with a sprained arm. It was paining him considerably and may be broken.

George Grassman jumped and escaped injury.

Mr. Grassman and his two children were out for a pleasure spin and were going east on Thirteenth street, approaching the railroad crossing as the fast train was due.

Mr. Grassman did not hear the train but his son did and shouted the alarm. In his haste Mr. Grassman threw the car onto slow speed and it ran onto the track directly in front of the train.

The pilot of the engine hit the auto and after pushing it along about fifty feet tossed it to one side down a bank and into a opol of water. The auto was badly wrecked but can be repaired.

The train was brought to a stop but proceeded when it was seen no one was killed.

The auto was gotten out of the ditch at 4:30.

A CHANGE

New Picture Show Is Being Planned

More picture shows! That seems to be the slogan, and don't be at all surprised should one be opened in the Horr biulding, corner Gallia and Gay streets. It is known that at least two promoters have been negotiating for the room and if either one is successful in securing it, a motion picture show will be thrown open to the public.

Miss Dugan Married

Word was received Saturday by Mrs. Mothias J. Wall, of East Second street, that her niece, Miss Charlotte Dugan, was married last Thursday to George Moore, B. & O. ticket agent at Guyandotte, W. Va., where both parties reside. It was intended to keep the wedding a secret, but the news leaked out.

Thomas Dugan, the grandfather of the girl, was the president of the old bank which stood at the corner of Market and Second streets, and which was known as Thomas Dugan & Co. The parents of Miss Dugan were in Portsmouth last week as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wall.

Charges Of Delinquency

[illegible]

IT IS ALL IN THE TASTE IF MADE OF MAGNOLIA FLOUR

BAUCUS TO FACE NEW CHARGES?

From all indications former Chief of Police J. A. Baucus will be reinstated in his former position Monday. The writ of mandamus granted by Judge Blair Friday afternoon has not yet been served upon Mayor Searcy and will not be until Monday morning. It is definitely understood that the mayor will obey the order of the court upon receipt of the writ and reinstate the deposed chief in his former position.

The journal entry of Friday's proceedings which bear the O. K. of Judge Blair peremptorily directs Mayor Searcy to reinstate Baucus. The costs are taxed against the city.

Though the writ is peremptory and could have been served Friday evening, the deposed chief appears to be in no hurry and will let the matter go over until Monday when the writ will be served unless he sees fit to hold off longer.

Unofficially it is rumored that new charges will be preferred against Baucus as soon as he has been reinstated.

Solicitor Small when asked concerning Baucus' reinstatement, stated that no action would be taken to prevent the execution of the writ and that Mayor Searcy would reinstate the deposed chief when so ordered by the proper authorities.

When asked if new charges would be filed against Baucus in case he were reinstated, Mr. Small replied that he was unable to say. He stated that he had heard that charges would be brought against him but by whom and the nature of them he did not know.

In case new charges are brought the newly organized civil service commission will hear and pass upon their merits.

PORTSMOUTH BEAT NEWARK

The grounds were so wet at Millbrook Saturday that only one game was played. About 450 were present. Moore and Weinberg were the battery for Portsmouth and C. Hollingsworth and Anderson for Newark.

There will be a double header Sunday.

First Inning.

Kendall singled to right and was forced at second by Myers. Moore to Reckhemer. White skied to O'Day. Riehl lifted to Reckhemer. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Breen lifted to left. Conwell grounded, short to first. O'Day flied to center. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Second Inning.

Franken fanned. Rutherford singled through short. Conley walked. Anderson and Hollingsworth both grounded, Moore to Scudder. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Scudder singled to center. Weinberg popped to White, trying to sacrifice. Reckhemer flied to second. Childs singled through third. Callis singled to right. Scudder slipped and fell at third failing to score. Moore grounded, second to first. No runs, three hits, no errors.

Third Inning.

Kendall grounded to Scudder. Myers walked. White flied to O'Day. Riehl flied to Callis. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Breen doubled to left. Conwell sacrificed. O'Day and Scudder both grounded, pitcher to first. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Fourth Inning.

Franken singled to left. Rutherford sacrificed. Conley grounded, third to first. Anderson flied to O'Day who made a great catch. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Weinberg walked. Reckhemer sacrificed. Childs singled to left, Weinberg scoring. Callis was hit by pitched ball. Moore singled to first, filling the bases. Breen hit into a double play, pitcher to catcher to first. One run, two hits, no errors.

Fifth Inning.

Breen in left made one of the most spectacular catches ever seen at the park nipping a long fly off Hollingsworth's bat. He turned a somersault but held to the ball. Kendall flied to second. Myers was safe on Reck's error. White fouled to Conwell. No runs, no hits, one error.

Conwell singled to right. O'Day singled through short. Scudder sacrificed. Weinberg sent a sacrifice fly to center. Conwell scoring and O'Day taking third. Reckhemer singled to center. O'Day scoring. Reckhemer died stealing. Two runs, three hits, no errors.

Sixth Inning.

LAWYERS PAY TRIBUTE TO JUDGE THOMPSON

Members of the Portsmouth Bar association convened in solemn session Saturday morning and adopted resolutions on the death of the late United States Judge Albert C. Thompson. Practically all the members of the local bar were present and many of them paid fitting eulogies to the honor of the distinguished jurist.

Immediately after court was opened by the bailiff, Judge Blair, who was on the bench stated the object of the session. He then vacated the bench in favor of Attorney George O. Newman, president of the bar association, who presided during the session.

Attorney J. W. Bannon offered resolutions, at the same time making the following eulogistic remarks:

"Judge Thompson acquired a great deal of knowledge by hard and diligent study. Practicing, as he did at a time, when court stenographers were not used, he had to prepare all his work and take all his notes with the pen. It may be said of him that he was not born with a spoon in his mouth, but with a pen in his hand. He early showed his ability at the bar and set an example that all young men might do well to copy. He was a man of great industry in his profession. I would say that he was a better judge than a trial lawyer. He was greatly hampered by the wound which he received during the war, oftentimes being compelled to cease work on account of bleeding at the lungs. He was always fair and would allow no undue tactics to be used. It can be truly said of him that he died in the harness. He was one of the most faithful judges that I ever knew. I have oftentimes pleaded with him to cease work and rest, but he would not do so. I do not know any man that is a better example for young men to follow than Judge Thompson."

Mr. Bannon then read the following resolutions:

Albert C. Thompson having departed this life on the 26th day of January, 1910, the members of the bar of Scioto county, Ohio, where he commenced his career as a lawyer, and where he resided the greater part of his professional life, deem it their duty to report to the court a brief memorial of his place in the history of the state as a lawyer, judge and statesman.

Judge Thompson was born at Brookville, Pennsylvania, January 28, 1842. He acquired such education as was offered by the schools of his native town, and later entered upon a collegiate course at Jefferson college, Pennsylvania, where he studied until the outbreak of the civil war, when he obeyed the call of the nation to defend its unity and integrity, and enlisted April 23rd, 1861, in the Eighth regiment of Pennsylvania volunteers, and served in the Army of the Potomac until he was severely wounded at the second battle of Bull Run by a rifle ball penetrating his breast, from which he never fully recovered, and ultimately was the cause of his death. Although suffering from this bullet, which he carried in his body to his death, he continued to render such service as he was able as a member of an invalid corps until about the beginning of the year 1864, when he resigned and entered the office of George Jenks, an eminent lawyer of Pennsylvania, and afterwards solicitor general of the United States, to study the profession of the law. Shortly after his admission to the bar in his native state, he came to the city of Portsmouth and entered upon the practice of his profession. After several years of active practice he was elected and served one term as probate judge of this county, and afterwards was elected common pleas judge of this subdivision, but only served a portion of his term when, having been elected a member of congress, he resigned his office of judge and served as member of congress for three terms. At the close of this service he was appointed by the president as a member of the commission to revise and codify the criminal laws of the United States, and was subsequently, in September, 1898, appointed Judge of the United States district court of the Southern District of Ohio by President McKinley, his term closing with his death.

During his career as a lawyer he was engaged as a zealous, industrious practitioner, enjoying a large and lucrative practice, and, and at a bar where Oscar F. Moore and Wells A. Hutchins were leaders and noted as trial lawyers of extraordinary ability, he held his place and stood in the front rank of the lawyers of his state.

His record at bar, upon the common pleas bench of his state, as judge of the district court of the United States, and in congress as legislator, is a matter of public history, known to all men, and appears in the records of the state and nation for all time. As a lawyer he was able, industrious and of great legal learning. He recognized to the fullest extent the duty he owed to his profession and to his client. "He made war for his client." He made the most thorough preparation of the cases in which he was engaged, and was unwearied in the examination of the legal principles applicable to them. He had an active, discriminating mind, and a rare ability in distinguishing cases. Upon the bench of the state and of the United States his clear and penetrating mind, his power of grasping the controlling propositions in cases on trial before him, and his patient, laborious, judicial consideration of all cases submitted for his decision resulted in the establishment of justice. An expression of his, remembered by members of the committee, when, as not infrequently occurs, the technical law of the case would seem to conflict with justice was this: "There is a fallacy somewhere. You want to dig deeper. When you get to the bottom and find the real governing principle the law and justice will coincide." The sole end of litigation with him was to see that the right prevailed. The state and the nation was honored in his life and a great loss was sustained in his death.

His bearing, conduct and fidelity at the bar, and on the bench were worthy of imitation, and an example that younger members might well desire to imitate.

The committee therefore present the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the members of this bar learned with sincere regret of the death of Judge Thompson, for many years honored member of this bar and judge of this court.

Resolved, That as a citizen, soldier, lawyer, statesman, and judge, he rendered full, faithful and able service; but we especially remember and admire his profound ability and rare judgment as a lawyer and judge, and recognize the great loss sustained by the bar and bench.

Resolved, That this memorial and these resolutions be ordered by this court placed upon the records of the court, and

That a copy be sent to the family of Judge Thompson with an expression of the deep sympathy of the bar.

J. W. BANNON,
A. T. HOLCOMB,
JOHN C. MILNER,
NOAH J. DEVER,
T. C. ANDERSON.

After the offering of the resolutions several strong addresses were made by different members of the bar, all being masterful eulogies on the character of Mr. Thompson. Those who spoke were N. W. Evans, A. T. Holcomb, T. C. Anderson, Harry Ball, Theo. R. Funk and President George O. Newman. Space will not allow the publication of all the splendid eulogies, but one is given in full, that of Mr. Newman's, who was an intimate friend of the deceased.

Mr. George O. Newman said:

"I knew Judge Thompson for more than 40 years.

"He and his family were my next door neighbors for many years and his office was for a long time joining mine. I therefore could and did know him intimately and well, and it is a pleasure that after this long acquaintance I can endorse most cordially all that has been so well said of him in the resolutions, not in the way of fulsome praise or panegyric, but as a temperate expression of his merits.

"He was a good friend, a good neighbor and a good citizen, a man of undoubted integrity and a high sense of honor. He was fearless and independent in thought and action, true to himself and faithful and loyal to his friends. His remarkable career at the bar and in public life is an open book from the pages of which we know nothing we would wish to erase. He was as honest an fearless on the bench as in private life, ever aiming to do equal and exact justice to all men.

"Few of us may have the opportunity of becoming as noted or as useful to the state and country, but it will be well with us if at the close we can leave behind us the legacy of life as honest and as stainless as was his."

Then upon motion of Mr. Bannon the resolutions were unanimously adopted by a rising vote. Adjournment was then taken and Judge Blair ascended again to the bench. Mr. Bannon then presented the resolutions in a form of a motion to the court and asked that they be spread upon the records of the court. The motion was accepted and the clerk ordered to make the entry. A copy of the resolutions were also sent to Mrs. Thompson.

Miss Lola Cringmiles entertained her Sunday school class at her residence on East Sixth street, Friday evening with a sumptuous dinner.

GRAND JURY GRINDS AWAY

Greenup, Ky., June 11.—The grand jury in session here is still out and from present indications will not report before themiddle of next week.

Already over a hundred witnesses have been examined and there are many more to be heard yet.

The general opinion is that indictments will be returned by the wholesale and that some surprises will be sprung when the findings of the jury is made public.

Many whiskey cases are being investigated and it is almost certain the Fullerton and South Portsmouth soft drink stands will be hit hard.

The Ferguson-Sarah Jane Higgins murder case will be called Monday instead of Tuesday, on request of Prosecutor Cole.

Mrs. John Wurster is in receipt of the following account of the wedding of her cousin, Mr. Everett Drennen, who will be remembered as best man at the wedding of Mr. Chester Lloyd to Miss Marjorie Drew, of this city, and as guest at the Wurster home and whose many friends here will enjoy reading of his wedding. The account appeared in the Ohio Valley News of Martin's Ferry, Ohio.

"In the presence of a brilliant assemblage last evening at Trinity Episcopal church the marriage of Miss Louise Bright Miller, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Wm. N. Miller, of this city, and Mr. Everett Drennen, of Fairmont, son of Mrs. E. J. A. Drennen of Martins Ferry, O., was solemnized by the rector, Rev. S. Scollay Moore.

The edifice has been the scene of a number of important matrimonial events, but none ever surpassed in elegance that of last night. Nine o'clock was the time designated for the ceremony and previous to that hour a great number of guests assembled, they being shown to seats by the ushers, Messrs Andrew Newbery, of Ray, Wyoming; Arthur Dickson, of Martins Ferry, O.; Dudley Howard, of Cincinnati, O., Brooks Fleming, James Watson and E. R. Kingsland, of Fairmont. The church was elaborately decorated for the occasion, the motif being pink and green effectively carried out with poenies, their foliage and streamers of ribbon of the first named shade. A great profusion of flowers were used, clusters being attached with pink ribbons to the pews reserved for the choir and the same arrangement prevailed at the chancel rail. A mound of poenies were massed on the altar and overhead an immense pendant was suspended, fashioned of the blossoms, plumosus and knots of ribbon disposed of in a shower interwined with poenies and greenery. This picturesque environment made an ideal setting for the nuptial event.

Preliminary to the marriage a recital was given by the organist and choir director, Mr. McHenry McChor who interpreted a number of selections in a manner that demonstrated he is an artist in technique and execution. Among the most notable compositions rendered were Hollins' Concert Overture, Woodman's Wedding Hymn, Dvorak's Humoresque, Roger's Wedding Processional, Mendelssohn's Spring Song, Stebbins' "In Summer" and Schuberts's Serenade. Interspesing numbers on the organ by Mr. McChord were two songs by Mrs. C. J. Scott, who previous to the entrance of the bridal party rendered in her usual charming fashion, "O Perfect Love," by Wood, and the "Wedding Morn," by Nevin. The vested choir sang Mossitta's Processional hymn blending into the nuptial music from Lohengrin by Wagner, to the strains of which the principals and their attendants entered the church.

A line in the aisle was formed by the ushers, who were joined by the matron of honor and bridesmaids Mrs. George Nelson Barrere, of Columbus, O., Misses Marguerite Drennen of Martins Ferry, O., the groom's sister, who was maid of honor; Sara A. Row, of Wheeling; Helen Miller, of Toledo, O.; Ruth Harris, Jeannette Rathbone, Julia Fulton and Mildred Dare, of Parkersburg. These ladies made their entrance by vestry room. From this apartment also came later the groom and his best man, Mr. Ward White, of this city. They advanced to the altar and awaited the arrival of the bride, who accompanied by her father was preceded by the attendants and ushers, by whom they were met at the vestibule to the transept. The wedding ceremony was performed by the officiating clergyman, according to the rubric of the Episcopal church, while the organist played Wagner's Evening Star. Judge Miller gave his daughter in marriage. The ring was held by Master Watson Tait, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Tait.

After the plighting of the troth and Blessing Stainers Sevenfold Amen was rendered and then Mendelssohn's masterpiece to which the bridal party left the edifice. While the guests were dispersing the choir sang Barnaby's Recessional and Mr. McChord rendered the wedding march from Tannhauser by Wagner.

Exceptionally handsome were the gowns worn by the members of the bridal party. The bride was lovely in an imported costume of ivory white lace fashioned along becoming lines over a satin foundation. The gown had the tunic effect and was made with a sweeping train, to the bottom of which fell the tulle veil held in place on the coiffure by a semi-coronet of orange blossoms. A shower bouquet of bride roses was carried. The toilette was most becoming to the svelte figure of the wearer.

A reception at the Elks club following the ceremony was an important part of the wedding. The company was received in the ballroom, decorated for the occasion with ferns and palms effectively arranged. In the receiving line were the bride and groom, their parents and the judges of the supreme court of West Virginia, of whom the bride's father is an associate Judge Ira Robinson of Grafton; Judge L. Judson Williams, of Charleston, Judge G. W. Poffenberger, of Point Pleasant, and Judge Henry Brannon, of Weston. With the exception of the latter the gentlemen were accompanied by their wives.

Mrs. Gilbert Watson and Mrs. William Bentley presided at the marriage register and Mrs. Hunter Moss and Mrs. Harry O. Hiteshew distributed the wedding cake, these ladies being stationed in the ballroom. The punch bowl in the library was in favor with a large number of the guests. The beverage was dispensed by Mrs. Kenner B. Stephenson and Misses Bertha Metlinger and Flora Gerwig. A refection of [illegible] appointments was served. The [illegible] laid for the bridal party was done in white and green, a mound of white poenies and maidenhair ferns forming the centrepiece and a cluster of white roses being at the place for each guest. The [illegible] were of heart design when [illegible].

Mr. and Mrs. Drennen departed this morning for an extended honeymoon trip. They will visit places on the great lakes and a part of their outing will be delightfully unusual and romantic.

The bride is one of Parkersburg's fairest and most cultured young ladies. She is a graduate of Lake Erie College of Painesville, O. and is a talented and accomplished singer, having spent several months in New York City, while devoting her time to voice culture. She is possessed of unusual beauty and attributes which have made her a social favorite here. Mr. Drennen is an excellent young man of superior traits of character, conceded to be eminently worthy of the helpmate he has won. He is a graduate of Cornell and successful in business, besides being an athlete of note. He has been particularly fortunate as a tennis player, winning several trophies in events of importance. For several years he has been connected with the Fairmont Coal Co., holding a prominent position. He and his bride began their wedded life with every indication of a happy prosperous future. A large number of out-of-town guests were present at the wedding, evidencing the wide acquaintance and popularity of the couple, who as [illegible] and [illegible] will no doubt continue to enjoy the social prestige they have had in the past and for which [illegible] have been so admirably fitted.

Lingerie And Lace Frock

POSED BY MISS FLORENCE SEARS OF THE FOLLIES OF

In midsummer the lingerie frock is always permissible, and some of these costumes are rich enough to wear to formal receptions. For instance, the little marquise lingerie costume shown here is particularly dainty in style and is a charming example of sheer batiste combined with two kinds of lace and tucking.

The long front panel gives height to the figure and the skirt fitted by pin tucks over the hips is particularly graceful.

The frock is accompanied by a white hat and white parasol.

Mr. Ed Y[illegible], of East Portsmouth, is [illegible] his vacation at [illegible], Minn., as guest of relatives.

Mr. J. B. M[illegible], of St. Albans, W. Va., [illegible] of Mr. Henry [illegible] on the way to Cincinnati [illegible].

Mrs. G. M. O[illegible], Mr. [illegible] Y[illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] summer vacation.

Miss Etta [illegible] is visiting friends at Ironton.

Mr. Frank E[illegible], of Gallipolis, is visiting here, his former residence place.

The resignation of Miss Gertrude Jackson as a member of the Portsmouth high school took effect Friday. Miss Jackson was one of the best liked teachers that has ever been at the high school and her resignation is much regretted.

Ruth, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. "Tommy" Albrecht, of Gay near Tenth street, was tendered a pleasant surprise party Friday, June 10th, it being her 11th birthday.

Despite the inclemency of the weather, quite a crowd of little folks were present to enjoy the festivities of the occasion. Yet, had the day been more favorable, an immense crowd of little folks had planned to lure Ruth to Millbrook park, and there surprised her.

The afternoon was spent in playing all the games dear to the childish hearts; as Mrs. Albrecht had given the entire house over for their playing. None seemed to enjoy themselves more than Dorothy, the two year old, winsome little daughter of the household, who was the center of all the laughter and enjoyments of the little ones.

At the close of the afternoon, the charming little hostess led her guests across the street, to Robert Kerns ice cream parlor and all enjoyed ice cream, cake and bon bons, after which all took leave of their lovable little hostess, wishing her many such happy anniversaries.

The following little folks were present, being only a small percentage of those who intended coming, being prevented by the unfavorable weather: Carol Patton, Dorothy Patton, Ettalene Hubbard, Helen Hubbard, Mary Beaumont, Kathryn Beaumont, Garnet Donley, Gladys Donley, Phyllis Fish, Della Oakley, Dora Newman, Lucile Massa, Mary Adams, Dorathea Fultz.

Hr. and Mrs. R. W. Jones of Gallia street have as guest this week, Mrs. Mary C. Pugh, Mrs. Roberta Talbot and son, Harry and Walter and Mrs. H. C. Myers and daughter Bessie of Vanceburg.

Mrs. Mary Delaney of Waller street, has gone to Rowland, Ky., for a month's visit with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Pyles of Huntington, W. Va., will soon be among new residents of this city, their household effects having preceded them here Friday.

Mr. Charles Millar of Carnegie, Pa., chief electrical engineer on the Pennsylvania railroad, who is visiting his former home, the Millar farm at Wakefield, will also visit here.

In July an outing at Millbrook Park will take place under the auspices of Central Presbyterian Woman's Missionary society which held this week's meeting, the June session, at the home of Mrs. Charles Wiget of Chillicothe street, with Mesdames Margaret Maier, Charlotte Dellert, Misses Mary and Lucy Berndt as assistant hosts.

The program was as follows:
Devotional, Mrs. F. D. Conger.
Alaska, Mrs. Lena Nagel.
South America, Mrs. Elizabeth Schmidt.

A social hour over refreshments preceded adjournment.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sullivan and daughter, Miss Anna of Buena Vista were here to see Miss Anna's twin sister, Miss Amelia Sullivan graduated from St. John's College, Holy Redeemer Parish.

Mesdames Clara Berthold, Elizabeth Daub, Margaret Berndt will be hosts at the July meeting of German M. E. Frauen Verein.

Miss Anna Varner is at home from Cincinnati where she visited relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Clay V. Sanford, Mr. A. L. Sanford and son Mr. Louis Sanford, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Varner and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Varner and family.

Mrs. David Tipton has as guest her cousin Mrs. James Harrel of Jackson.

Mrs. Howard Sellards will be host at the June 24th meeting of the Country club.

Mrs. Bertha S. Wheeler and little daughter, Fern left Saturday for Cincinnati where the little girl will undergo an operation for crossed eyes.

Mrs. J. C. Warnock of Carter City, Ky., and Mrs. J. W. Miller and little son Russell of Warnock, Ky., are visiting relatives, Mrs. D. E. Holbrook of Waller street and sister Mrs. Owen Hopkins of East Sixth street of whom Mrs. Warnock is aunt and Mrs. Miller sister.

Miss Emily Ball is visiting her sister Miss Anna Ball of Covington, Ky., and later will go to Birmingham, Ala., to visit their brothers, Messrs. Fred and William Ball.

With a delightful surprise party Mr. and Mrs. G. Reinhardt celebrated the twelfth birthday anniversary of their daughter, Loraine. The rooms were decorated with crimson ramblers and other exquisite roses and poenies of roseate hue abd also with honeysuckle. The chandelier was also adorned with roses and honeysuckle, and to the corners of the room from the chandelier were ribbons, with white and yellow tissue paper extending to the four corners of the tables, which were decorated with honeysuckle. At one table was a large birthday cake, with "Happy Birthday, Loraine, 1898 to 1910." and also gleamed with twelve burning candles.

Miss Margaret Hans, Miss Gladys Howard and Miss Loraine Reinhardt played some very beautiful selections on the piano, and also singing dancing and games were indulged in. In spite of the bad weather the invited little guests were all present in pretty white costumes, as follows:

Hila Seamon, Emma Watkins, Helen Warner, Jessie Bassett, Naomi McCall, Margaret Hans, Gladys Reinhardt, Norma Marsh, Elva Adams, Ethel Clausing, Marguerite Bramley, Lucile Binder, Flo. Seamon, Lula Conrad, Clara Watkins, Bessie Reinoehl, Josephine Clare, Gladys Howard and Loraine Reinhardt. The only out-of-town guest was Miss Emma Butler, of Baltimore, Md., a cousin of Loraine.

Many beautiful presents were received by the little hostess. At 5:30 the merry company wished Loraine many more happy birthdays and departed homeward.

In serving Mrs. Reinhardt was assisted by her sister, Mrs. Sara Little. Strawberry ice cream, home-made cakes, candies and bananas were the dainties served.

The games included pinning the tail on the donkey, and Gladys Howard won the first prize, a beautiful picture, and Loraine Reinhart, the booby favor.

Mrs. Jacob Bassler, of Madison street, is reported as alarmingly ill with tuberculosis.

Mr. S. P. Piefer, of Otway, was a business visitor here Friday.

Saturday morning at 6 o'clock Mervin D. Cunningham, a prominent painter of this city, and Miss Ada M. Allbaugh, a wellknown young lady of the East End, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's mother, 388 East Twelfth street, Rev. Freeman W. Chase officiating. The bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Cunningham, and the bride's mother, Mrs. Emma Allbaugh and two younger sisters of the bride, Misses Alma and Emma, were the only witnesses to the ceremony.

Soon after their marriage the popular and happy couple departed on a short wedding trip, taking the morning train to Cincinnati.

The bride was tastefully attired in a stylish salmon-colored jacket suit with gloves and hat to match. The young couple made a very handsome and happy appearance.

On their return and for the present the newlyweds will reside with the bride's mother, and until the fine new home which Mr. Cunningham is having built on the hilltop, is finished, when they will go to housekeeping.

The Times joins with their many friends in extending congratulations.

On Friday evening the J. I. G. club girls were entertained at the home of one of the members, Miss Della Puckett, as compliment to Miss Myrtle Hughes, who is soon to wed Mr. Charles Rogers, of Columbus, O., and to celebrate the graduation of Miss Bess McFarland from the P. H. S.

During the evening Miss Hughes was given the end of a string and told to follow it to its termination, where she found a beautiful bedspread, a gift from the girls. Miss McFarland was given a beautiful gold bar pin which will be highly treasured among the many graduation gifts.

Among the other pleasures of the evening was a flower wedding contest, the winner being Miss Ruth Cook, who received as a prize a beautiful embroidered apron. Miss Hattie Tatman won the booby prize. At the conclusion of the contests the guests were invited to the dining room where, at a prettily appointed table, the hostess served dainty refreshments of ice cream and cake, she being assisted by Mrs. James Puckett. At the table announcement was made that quite soon the wedding bells would be ringing for another of these jolly girls, but her name is withheld for the present.

Miss Anna Jewell, of Henley, and Mr. Charles O. Ferguson, a stage manager of this city, were married by Rev. A. D. Singer, according to word received here.

A former Portsmouth resident, Mrs. J. R. Houston, of Cincinnati, who recently visited here as guest of Mrs. L. C. Turley, is recovering from the effects of a recent slight surgical operation.

Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Wright, of Prebles, are visiting Mrs. Wright's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Oakes, of Gallia street.

Master Richard Duduit, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Duduit, Jr., has secured a vacation position as office boy at the Excelsior shoe factory.

Bride's And Bridesmaids Summer Gowns

This ivory satin bridal gown, with bodice gracefully swathed and trimmed with Honiton lace, has court train lined throughout with fine tucked net and finished with a small kilting at the edge. On the corner of the left end is embroidered one large true lover's knot, matching the corners of the fine Brussels net veil, draped over a small half-hoop of orange blossoms. The bride's attendant wore a dainty, simple gown of ivory white silk colienne, trimmed with silk lace. The hat was white straw, being trimmed with green ribbon and pink roses.

Mrs. Mary E. Finch, of Columbus, is visiting relatives, her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Treuthart, and at the home of her nephew, Mr. S. L. Rice.

Miss Bernice Wells, of Memphis, Tenn., is coming next week to visit a school friend, Miss Augusta Mead, of East Seventh.

Miss Margaret Patterson is visiting Miss Lucile Hale, of Jackson.

Invitations to the wedding of Miss Alice Cristman and Mr. Ellsworth E. Starin of McDermott, have been issued. The wedding will take place June 21st at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Cristman of 78 Gallia St.

Mrs. George M. Osborne will be host at next Tuesday afternoon's meeting of the Hamilton Whist.

Excellent music will be rendered by All Saints Episcopal Choir Sunday, Rev. J. D. Herron's last Sunday as regular pastor of the charge.

Rev. J. D. Herron spent Friday and Saturday in Cincinnati as examining chaplain of candidates for the Episcopalian priesthood.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Wendelken left Saturday for Mariett to attend the Home Coming.

Mrs. James Distel will entertain the T. C. C.'s next Thursday evening at her pretty new home.

On Friday evening J. I. G. met at the home of Miss Puckett on Union street. A feature of the occasion was the presentation of a lovely gift to a bride-elect member, Miss Myrtle Hughes. Mr. Charles Rogers of Columbus who will wed in June according to current report.

Mis Barbara Shela will entertain German M. E. Epworth League next Monday evening.

The Cheerful Workers will give an entertainment followed by refreshments next Thursday evening at Second Presbyterian Tabernacle. A pretty part of the "Mikado." The Lilliputian chorus will be a part of the program

Mr. and Mrs. John Massie and family have moved from Ohio Furnace to Ironton, where Mr. Massie will be employed at an iron furnace.

On account of the rain the Altrurians and the Trinity Primary Sunday school have deferred their visitings to Millbrook and the Westminster Guild deferred their outing to Crichton's Inn, all these outings dated for Saturday.

Mrs. Frank Corriell who has been conducting a first class rooming and boarding house in the Baird property on East Second, has bought a home, the Walter Finney property on West Sixth and soon will move thither.

Mrs. O. P. Bullocks' visitor Miss Mamie Griffith of Long Beach, Cal., will leave Tuesday for San Francisco, Cal., to join her father, Mr. S. N. Griffith.

Mrs. S. B. McKerrihan, of East Eighth left Thursday for Massachusetts, whither she goes to attend the graduation of her daughter, Miss Pearl, from Mt. Holyoke college, and to visit her daughter Miss Minta, who is a governess in a prominent New York family. She and Miss Pearl will travel up the Hudson, visiting West Point and other places there along and return home by New York and the sea voyage to Norfolk.

The Clover Leaf circle will meet June 13th at the home of Miss Clara Musser in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Turley and daughter, Miss Nell, will leave next Monday, instead of Sunday, for Cleveland to see their son, Mr. Charles Turley, graduated from the University school, preparatory to entering Cornell.

Mr. Mark F. Wilcox left Saturday for Clairmount, California, instead of Minnesota to pass the summer in the physical development afforded by work in the harvest field, as was his plan of mental recreation. The change was obligatory on account of a recent return of rheumatic trouble, with which Mr. Wilcox is somewhat afflicted. As parting favor Mr. Wilcox was presented with a fine fountain pen and an autograph album by Second Presbyterian choir, in which he has been a valuable member.

Mrs. Anne Reed's spacious and elegant home on West Second, was the scene of the christening of her youngest grandson, Master Edward Reed Pursell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Tracy Pursell, of West Second. The officiating clergymen was Rev. J. N. Eason. The godfather was Mr. Edward T. Reed, the uncle for whom the baby is named. Miss Sue Pursell, one of the baby's father's sisters, was to have been god-mother had she not been absent from the city. Others present besides those above mentioned, were Mrs. J. N. Eason, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bannon and daughter, Persis, and Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Pursell's other children, Billy and Joanne Pursell, and Mr. Percy Reed, a brother of Mrs. Pursell, formerly Miss Bertha Reed. A fine dinner followed the christening.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar F. Draper, of this city, have returned from Oxford, where they attended commencement at the Western, from where Mrs. Draper was graduated fifty years ago this June, with high honors, and where in her jubilee year, as visitor at the old Western, she and a classmate of hers, Miss Margaret Coles, of Ironton, were treated with the utmost deference. They were the only members of their class of twenty-five—the class of 1860—present at this June's alumni meeting, though seventeen members are still alive and residing in various part of the world. On the program at the alumni meeting Mrs. Draper was given choice place as one of the piano soloists. She also read an original poem, which she composed for, and dedicated to the class of 1910, out of compliment to one of the graduates, Miss Alice Dever, of this city, a former member of the T. O. P. club, a juvenile organization originated (during its several years' existence) directed by Mrs. Draper—aways one of this city's best qualified and most ambitious workers along lines literary, musical and also all that peculiarly pertains to the best of lines artistic and aesthetic and other phases of the higher education.

Seldom in life is experienced the great pleasure Mrs. Draper must have felt in being able to attend (in company with her better half) the fiftieth anniversary of graduation from so notable an institution of learning, the old Western, [illegible] continues to grow more and more flourishing from year to year [illegible] of retrograding as [illegible] schools have done. [illegible] friends certainly are as [illegible] Mrs. Draper as she justly is of her alma mater.

CITY'S TAX LEVY MAY HAVE TO BE BOOSTED

It begins to look as though the city administration will have to submit to the inevitable and raise the tax levy for the next year.

The finance committee which has been deliberating on the question for the past few weeks has tried hard to hold down the levy to its present rate, but the growing expenses of running the city make it impossible and the levy will likely be increased two mills, and the tax rate raised from $8.50 to $9.00, owing to increases by the county and school board. The matter will not be definitely determined until Monday when another meeting will be held.

The question was thoroughly discussed at Friday night's caucus meeting. Judge Osborn, who is a member of the finance committee, said that the county as well as the school board and sinking fund trustees were all raising levies and there was no reason why the city should not do the same. It will require an extra amount of money to operate the new hilltop fire engine house; also the hospital and the safety fund is already overdrawn, while the service fund has to be increased to continue the public improvements under way. The primary and special elections have been a great burden to the city.

The increased tax levy will continue for only the year 1911, for, with the coming of December next will come the new appraisement and the city will then obtain some relief.

Council agreed to raise the salaries of the day and night patrolmen $5 per month, or from $60 to $65, and also allowed Capt. Thomas Albrecht an advance of $10, or from $60 to $70. The increase was unanimously favored because of the big amount of territory added to the beats with the reduction made in the force. Some suggested that the city firemen might now come in and ask for an increase also, but the councilmen took the view that the police were really more entitled to an advance because they did not get a day's layoff every week, as do the firemen, and are kept constantly on a go, wearing out more clothes in patrolling beats that were formerly policed by thrice their number. The turnkeys are not included in the salary raise and will continue to draw $60 per month.

Mayor Searcy requested council to provide a fence at the lower side of the proposed York place playground as a safeguard against children falling over the wall. An appropriation of $50 was accordingly voted for that purpose. A four-foot wire screen, 200 feet long, will be put up and an extra light will also be installed, as it is intended to keep the playground in use nightly until the curfew sounds. Two kindergarten teachers will be on duty at all times.

Service was reported completed on Hutchins avenue and legislation will be passed immediately for the paving of that thoroughfare. An extra light was ordered place on the upper market square.

Some additional improvements were authorized at the city pumping station. These include the painting of the wood work and cornice outside, repairs to the roof and lower wall to the coal bin. While there was no disposition to spend any more money there than necessary the councilmen feel that the building should be kept up, for the city will continue to use it for some purpose or other even after the new water works is completed.

Soft Drink Raids At Ashland

Ashland, Ky., June 11.—The police department of Ashland, under the able direction of Chief of Police Hightchew, seems to be determined to rid the city of all the soft drink stands which make a practice of selling booze. Friday the chief and several of his men raided places conducted by Honest John Kelley, Bob Hammond, John Conley, Thomas Gannon and the Mountain house on Thirteenth street, and the bar in connection with the Ventura hotel. Conley has toloid Nando Felty stand just at the top of the grade on Fifteenth street. Honest John Kelley keeps a stand just across from the mayor's office and Hammond and Gannan are on Fifteenth street. At each of the places plenty of whisky and beer was found and the men who were in charge arrested and placed under bond for hearing later.

Is Engaged As A Nurse

Life.

The poet's exclamation: "O Life! I feel the bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist; for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by them—to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. We are glad to say these words in its favor to the readers of our columns.

THROWS MUD AT AUTOS

Autoists complain about the actions of a boy living in the vicinity of Fifth and Court streets. The youngster has been delighting in throwing mud at passing machines and the other evening a prominent woman was made the target for his attack. She was completely covered with mud and water thrown by the boy with the aid of an old tin horn. The machine was brought to a quick stop and some of the occupants gave chase but the boy escaped.

Renews Furniture

Furniture sometimes looks old when it is not.

For the sake of looks some people buy new furniture when all they need is a can of Spartan Stain. You'd be surprised at the transformation you can make in your furniture and the fun you can have while you're doing it.

SPARTAN-STAIN THE FAULTLESS FINISH

actually makes old things new—gives them new beauty and brilliancy and adds years to their term of usefulness.

What it does for furniture it does for floors, doors and all woodwork.

Spartan Stain does not lap. It flows easily, dries quickly, sets slowly and permanently.

Important Police Case Now Before The Supreme Court

Columbus, June 11.—An interpretation of the Paine law is involved in a scrap over the office of chief of police in Marietta which was aired before the supreme court, Friday. The contention is whether or not the mayor had the right to appoint a chief who was not on the classified list between August 1, 1909, and January 1, 1910. This also carries with it the question of the validity of the opinion of the attorney general that there was no civil service commission during that period; and if there was not, it follows there could be no certified list, and hence the mayor could appoint any one he pleased to be chief.

Mayor McKinney of Marietta last December appointed W. T. Harness chief of police and the new mayor on January 1st removed him and gave the place to James Roney. Harness is suing to get the place back, and the present mayor says he is not entitled to it and that the old mayor did not have authority to appoint him because he was not from the classified list.

Harness contends, following the opinion of the attorney general, that there was no civil service commission and hence no classified list then, and so his appointment was valid. If it was valid the new mayor had no right to remove him without filing charges against him and finding there was proper cause for removal. There are many other cases of a similar nature in the state, so the decision of the court will be of more than ordinary importance.

State School Commission John W. Zeller is proudly exhibiting a diploma granted him at the commencement exercises of the Canal Fulton high school last Monday evening which bears evidence that he is a high school graduate. The fact that he did not get this document until about fifty years after he finished his course in this school only adds to his appreciation of it. In those days this school did not give diplomas and so that is the reason did not get one. The diploma bears the signatures of the members of the school board and the superintendent.

Professor B. F. Thomas of the physics department of the Ohio State University, who, under the old law, by virtue of his position, was state sealer of weights and measures, has turned over a portion of his "tools" to State Dairy and Food Commissioner Dunlap, who is made state sealer of weights and measures under the new law. He did not turn it all over because there is not room enough in the department for it. There is enough to fill a barn. The legislature neglected to either provide room for this paraphernalia or money to enforce the new law. But the commissioner will enforce it with money allowed for his other work.

Fred Lied, the former Columbus city official, serving four years for bribery, stands a poor chance of getting liberated before the expiration of his term. He has several indictments hanging over him and because of this the penitentiary board of managers will not consider his application for a parole. Lied's friends have been interceding for him with the board. Lied is a former Canton resident.

Two hundred students will be in Columbus Monday to take the examination of the state medical board. A novel test has been provided for. About two dozen patients have been obtained for the students to work on. They will be required to diagnose their cases and prescribe for them but fortunately for the patients they will not be required to do what these embyro doctors will say should be done in their cases. This will be the first test of the kind ever given.

GIRL THROWN FROM AUTO

As she was attempting to adjust her cloak shortly after leaving her place of employment, on Friday evening, in Dr. Test's automobile, Miss Stella Holland, a clerk at Brunner's store, was thrown out of the machine while it was going at a fast rate of speed, Fortunately Miss Holland escaped serious injury, although she was badly bruised and shaken up.

The accident occurred on the corner of Third and Market streets, where sewer excavations have recently been completed, and the pavement had sunk, leaving a depression in the street. Miss Holland had just completed her day's work at Brunner's store, and had seated herself in Dr. Test's automobile, at the invitation of Howard Thurman, his nephew, who was driving it.

Miss Holland was fastening her cloak when the corner of Third and Market was reached. The automobile hit the pavement depression violently throwing Miss Holland out. She struck the pavement with great force, but fortunately escaped serious injury.

Thurman immediately stopped the machine, and by that time others had reached the woman, among them Ed Russel, who witnessed the accident, and her employer, A. Brunner, who was standing a short distance away. Miss Holland was assisted into the auto and driven to Dr. Test's office, where she resides. Dr. Test stated to The Times, Saturday, that she would probably be all right in a couple of days.

Eastern Trip Was A Delightful One

Dr. and Mrs. P. J. Kline visited many places of national interest on their month's pleasure trip through the East and Canada. After leaving Toledo and Detroit they went down the St. Lawrence river stopping off at both Montreal and Quebec, visiting old battlefields, familiar to readers of American history. They also visited Boston and some of the old battlefields of the Revolutionary period, seeing among other relics the old drum on which first sounded the news of liberty and independence gained by the American patriots.

From Boston they went by steamship to Baltimore and also to Newport News and up the Patomac to Washington, walking down Pennsylvania avenue where 45 years ago the doctor marched in review with the victorious army of the North.

They spent several days at the capital visiting all of the points of interest and returned home having been absent exactly four weeks.

Why Buckley Is On His Vacation

There's no race suicide in Sergeant Dan Buckley's family was proven by the latest visit of the stork, the generous bird leaving a pretty litle baby daughter Friday evening. With the newcomer Dan's household contains a half dozen little Buckleys and he would not part with any single one of them for all of Rockefeller's millions.

Dan considered this was an appropriate time for a few days' leave of absence from duty and he will now have plenty of time to get thoroughly acquainted with the little Miss. The police vacation season begins June 15th and as Dan is first on the list he will have a good chance to rest up. George Sponsler has been appointed substitute policeman for the two months' period and he will do duty as night turnkey while Buckley expects to alternate on the various outside beats. Sponsler has given up a position as lock-stitching machine operator at the Excelsior shoe factory, where he has been employed for the past nine years.

George is a native of Fairfield county, O., and was born on the same farm on which the noted Jim Jeffries first saw the light of day, his father having been a tenant of the champion prize fighter's father, Rev. Alex Jeffries. George attended school with Jim who left that locality for California at the age of 13. It was a common thing for some of the school boys to do up Jeffries in their perodical fisticuffs, Jim at that time showing no signs of his future prowess.

N.&W. MAN HAS TAKEN BRIDE

At Brushy Fork, W. Va., at the home of the bride's mother a short time since, Miss Sallie Hall was united in marriage to Mr. C. E. Clark, a conductor on the N. & W. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. W. Moore of Williamson. After a tour which involved a trip to Niagara Falls and other northern points, the young couple came to Williamson where they will make their home with the bride's sister, Mrs. C. E. Dillon, at their comfortable home in the East End.

Miss Edith Sherbourn has taken a position as operator at the Bell telephone exchange.

N.&W. Has Big Cars

The Norfolk & Western now has coal cars in service with a rated capacity of 115,000 pounds. When these are loaded to their maxi mum weight of 130,000 pounds, they far surpass in weight carried by any other coal cars in the country.

Ticket Agent Has Broken Arm

Circleville, June 11.—J. D. Delaplane, ticket agent at the Norfolk & Western station at Main street crossing slipped and fell on the pavement in front of the Scioto Valley traction station this morning, breaking his left arm near the shoulder.

Young broker who dropped $50,000 in speculation is now learning glovemaking. Evidently determined not to handle all securities without gloves in future.

ACCEPT PLANS OF THE NEW SCHOOL

The plans for the new high school building were formally accepted by the board of education in special session Friday night, and bids for the erection of the big building will be advertised for Saturday. The bids will be opened on July 14th and the contracts awarded on that date.

Architect Pretzinger arrived Friday and the board held a special meeting Friday night and passed upon the plans. The changes in the plans ordered by the board a couple of weeks ago, were in minor detail and do not affect the exterior detail of the building any, which will be precisely as the large drawings that have been on display in the different show windows for some time.

The plan of the board is to have work begun as soon as the contract is awarded, so that the building can be completed in time for the opening of the term in the fall of 1911. By letting the contract on the middle of July a good headway on the building can be made by the contractors before the bad weather sets in this fall.

The board realizes that all possible dispatch will have to be made in order to get the building completed by the fall of 1911 and everything will be hurried along as fast as possible in keeping with the magnitude of the undertaking.

Boys Are Locked Up For Stealing Skates

Frank Watson and John Henderson, Jr., were locked up by the police Friday night for stealing skates from the Auditorium rink.

The boys acknowledged the theft of two pairs, but claimed they had returned them. They claimed they found some boards torn away from the side of the rink and entered it merely to play when they caught sight of the skates. These they took to a tent they had erected at Watson's home, nearby, and later, when they heard that Harry Bybee had missed the skates, Watson took them back. He is 14 years old while his companion is 16 and works at the Knight lunch wagon.

Watson was released as it was his first offense, but young Henderson was turned over to the probate court and his hearing fixed for Tuesday morning. He has been in trouble before for stealing at the high school building.

Shoots At A Dog

A young man was reported to the police Saturday morning for firing a pistol as he rode along eighth street on a bicycle. An investigation was made and it developed the man had been attacked by a dog and shot at the canine to protect himself.

N. & W. TO BUILD REST HOUSE AT CLARE

The N. & W. railway is at last going to provide comfortable quarters for its men at the lower end of the Cincinnati district.

A contract has just been awarded to T. W. Kirkbride, a Roanoke, Va., contractor, for a rest house to cost $1500. It will be equipped on a plan similar to a Y. M. C. A. and will be located at Clare. Work will be commenced immediately.

Saved From Awful Death.

How an appalling calamity in his family was prevented is told by A. D. McDonald, of Fayetteville, N. C., R. F. D. No. 8. "My sister had consumption," he writes, "she was very thin and pale, had no appetite and seemed to grow weaker every day, as all remedies failed, till Dr. King's New Discovery was tried, and so completely cured her that she has not been troubled with a cough since. It's the best medicine I ever saw or heard of." For coughs, colds, la grippe, asthma, croup, hemorrhage—all bronchial troubles, it has no equal; 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by The Fisher & Streich Pharmacy.

To Open A Grocery Monday

R. C. Kennedy of Sardinia has arrived in Portsmouth and is preparing to open up a first class grocery in the Cropper building, 1022 North Waller street, his father, George Kennedy, leading citizen and fair magnate of Sardinia, having bought the Griswold stock sold at bankrupt sale early in March with a view of starting his son in business.

Young Kennedy has just completed a course at college and is now here to take charge of the business which he will conduct. He is a splendid young man and will no doubt succeed.

The stock has been replenished and everything usually kept by a modern up-to-date grocer will be handled.

The store will be formerly opened Tuesday.

See Kennedy's ad in Monday's Times for the bargains he will offer.

HAIR WHITE AS SNOW

Restored to Natural Color with One Bottle of

WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR RESTORER

The Only True Hair Restorer, Tonic and Rejuvenator

ALMOST A MIRACLE

My hair was as white as snow when I commenced using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Restorer. One bottle restored my hair to its natural dark brown color. As I am now 70 years old, I consider the result most remarkable. It is an agreeable and refreshing hair dressing, keeping the hair soft and glossy, without being in the least greasy or sticky.

WM. WESTLAKE, 210 West Main Street, Rochester, N. Y.

Why hesitate when WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR RESTORER is daily producing just such results?

After years of study and analysis of the hair, we have been able to produce an ideal Hair Tonic and Restorer, which contains an actual constituent of hair, combined with ingredients of recognized merit for treatment of hair and scalp diseases. It makes and keeps the scalp clean and healthy, gives life, strength and lustre to the hair, and restores faded and gray hair to natural color.

No matter how long and thick your hair is, WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR RESTORER will make it longer and thicker. It will remove every trace of dandruff in a few days, stop falling in one week, and start a new growth in from one to three months.

These are facts that have been proven in scores of cases. WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR RESTORER is guaranteed to do all that it is claimed to do or the price will be refunded.

LORD'S MESSENGER IS THROWN INTO PRISON, HELD FOR RELATIVES

"Uncle Mich" Hamilton, the long bearded Lewis countian, who claims the Lord sent him to Portsmouth to reform her people, was taken into custody by the police Saturday morning.

Hamilton had been exhorting a small crowd at Third and Market streets and some one telephoned to the police that a crazy man was at large. Hamilton quietly submitted to arrest but gesticulated wildly as he accompanied Officers Beaumont and Stokely up street.

"Be careful boys, don't fight the Lord," warned the old fellow when told he would be held until relatives could come after him. Hamilton is without means, but confidently declares the Lord has been taking care of him and will continue to do so. At times his talk is very rational. He hails from a point nine miles back of Vanceburg.

Minch Hamilton was turned out on his promise to keep off the streets.

SUGAR TRUST MEN WERE CONVICTED

New York, June 11.—Charles R. Heike, white-haired secretary of the Sugar Trust, and Ernest W. Gerbracht, secretary of the Williamsburg Refinery, were found guilty Friday in the Federal court of conspiracy to defraud the government out of millions in sugar duties.

Heike was convicted on one count.

Gerbracht was convicted on all six counts.

For James F. Bendernagel, former cashier of the refinery, the jury stood seven to five for acquittal. He will be tried again.

This ends the government's second attempt to imprison the group of men responsible for the vast underweighing frauds to which the so-called trust was virtually confessed by the restitution of more than 2,000,000 in duty.

Heike is the highest official of the company upon whom blame has been fixed, and he now faces a possible sentence of two years in the Federal penitentiary and a fine of $10,000.

He is 65 years old and broken in health and spirits. His counsel, in summing up, declared repeatedly that a prison term meant nothing less than death.

Convicted on all six counts, Gerbracht can be sentenced to 12 years in prison, with a maximum fine of $10,00. Like Heike, he is past middle age, being 63 years old.

Spinney To Be Canned On Monday

Huntington, W. Va., June 11.—A meeting of the managers of the various teams comprising the Virginia Valley Baseball league will be held next Monday night at Point Pleasant. At the meeting it is declared that President John A. Spinney of Cincinnati will be deposed and his successor chosen from a number of applicants from different towns represented in the league. There has been considerable dissatisfaction among the managers for the past several weeks over the failure of the executive to take any active hand in promoting the interests of the new organization and this has culminated, it is said, in a unanimous agreement to elect a new president who will devote his entire time to the interests of the league. There are a number of candidates for the presidency and indications are that the contest will be a spirited one.

Acomia

Many Men Have It and Most of Them Worry About It

ACOMIA—It's a magic word—what does it mean? Simply absence of hair.

A bald-headed man has ACOMIA.

A million more men will have ACOMIA a year from now if they do not get rid of disgusting dandruff.

Dandruff is caused by a germ. This germ is a persistent sort of a germ. He lives on the vitality stored in the hair roots and the longer you tolerate his presence the surer you are of growing bald.

Kill the dandruff germs; that's the only way to keep from growing bald. Any capable doctor will tell you.

Parisian Sage is the most pleasant and invigorating hair dressing and dandruff remover in the world. It is not sticky or greasy. It will make women's hair soft, silky and luxuriant in a few days. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle. Fifty cents a large bottle at druggists everywhere and at Wurster Bros., who guarantee it. Mail orders filled, all charges prepaid, by Giroux Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

MAY MARRIAGE IS REVEALED TO FRIENDS

Charles H. Pollard, an employe at the steel plant, and Miss Stella Whitely, employed at Ziegler's, ... revealed to their friends today ... which they have kept ever since the 11th of May. It is ... that on that date they were made man and wife, Squire J. W. Dyer performing the legal ceremony, and he witnessed they are such. No explanation is offered why they desired to keep their marriage from being made public. They are a handsome and popular couple and their friends will not only ... the ... with interest ... have to congratulate them ... The groom has ... and ... a home at New Boston and they have taken up their abode therein.

FARMER'S WIFE HAD HEAP TO DO

Mrs. Shepherd Was in Bad Shape When She Could Not Stand on Her Feet.

Durham, N. C.—"I am a farmer's wife," writes Mrs. J. M. Shepherd, of this city, "and have a heap to do.

"Four months ago I could not stand on my feet, to do anything much, but at this time I do the most of my work. I took Cardui and it did me more good than all the doctors.

"You don't know half how I thank you for the Cardui Home Treatment. I wish that all women who suffer from womanly trouble would try the Cardui as I have."

Ladies can easily treat themselves at home, with Cardui, the woman's tonic. It is easy to take, and so gentle in its action, that it cannot do anything but good.

Being composed exclusively of vegetable ingredients, Cardui cannot lay up trouble in your system, as mineral drugs often do. Its ingredients having no harsh, medicinal effects, and being nonpoisonous and perfectly harmless, Cardui is absolutely safe for young and old.

Ask your druggist. He will tell you to try Cardui.

N. B.—Write to: Ladies' Advisory Dept., Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., for Special Instructions, and 64-page book, "Home Treatment for Women," sent in plain wrapper, on request.

Says Trivia, "Other play seems tame
Beside this noble outdoor game,
Which years ago, ere time took wings,
Was brought in vogue by queens and kings.

And when betimes the royal spouse
Is in his mood to role from the house
His wife might follow, and, in short,
Might beat him on the Tennis Court.

"They play the game the same way now,
With tumbled hair and dripping brow,
Tho' Tommy Dolt—he fails, they say,
Is in love with some new girl each day—
And that is why his favorite cry
When playing tennis is 'Love all!'
Love flocks with lovers in every port,
He wins out on the Tennis Court.

"Watch prim Miss Prune, who likes to play
With some men, though her hair is gray,
When, with a wild, inquiring air,
Rushing a racket here and there,
Her partner looked at her and said,
'Ah! I cry, Love!' her cheek grew red.
It seems he must have told some sort
Of truth upon the Tennis Court.

"When Jarod Green, our hired man,
While we're at lunch tries if he can Play at the game—first thing we know
A tennis ball at Jarod's blow

Breaks through the window, loops the loop.
And lands with splashes in the soup.
Says Jarod, 'Gimme I hadn't ort
To do that on the Tennis Court.'

"When father plays the game with me
It's always on a wager—see
He's sure to lose, and I'm content
With gloves or candies. When I've spent
My month's allowance I am glad
To play a winning game with Dad,
Who murmurs sadly, 'Well, my forte
Is not upon the Tennis Court.' "

B-r-r!

The optimist grew thoughtful,
And his words were sadly terse—
"The world is growing better,
But the climate's getting worse!"

MISSIONARY WORKERS HAD FINE CONVENTION

Ironton, O., June 11.—The next meeting of the District convention of the Woman's Home Missionary society will be held at Jackson and will be presided over by the newly elected president, Mrs. Laura Klee, of this city.

The meeting of the association which was held Friday at Wesley church proved a very enjoyable and profitable affair and was well attended.

The meeting opened at nine o'clock. On account of the illness of Mrs. Elizabeth Amberg of Portsmouth the president was absent, and the first session was opened by the second vice president, Mrs. Klee of Ironton.

"Onward Christian Soldiers" was the opening song. Mrs. C. C. McCabe conducted the devotional exercises, after which the convention sang, "Work for the Night is Coming."

The welcome address was made by Mrs. E. R. Wilburn and was most heartily given. The response was given by Mrs. H. Sellards of Portsmouth, thanking the society for their forethought and welcome.

The appointment of committees was as follows: Nominating committee, Mrs. H. A. Marting, Mrs. Flood, Mrs. Albert Clary, Miss Crawford and Mrs. Pickrel.

Committee on resolutions, Mrs. Eason, Mrs. Bruce, Mrs. McClure, Mrs. Gunnett. Mrs. Sellards has charge of the literature. Mrs. Skelton was appointed to take the names of the delegates.

Mrs. Trenthart, the corresponding secretary gave a most excellent report of the growth and extent of the district work. The following churches reported the amounts given for home mission work:

Ladies Auxiliary to Spencer church $231.48, Lucy Webb Hayes Circle $142.06.

Jackson, $85.30.

Coal Grove $11.55.

Trinity $199.97.

Wesley church $83.20. Mother's Jewels of Spencer $79.75; Queen Esther Circle, Trinity $47.35.

Rev. T. R. Watson gave a fine talk on Home Missions. The principal thought in his talk was: "That Home Missions Keep up close to Our Father," Mrs. John Cook gave the District Secretaries report. Mrs. Trenthart spoke in behalf of the Deaconness Home of Columbus.

Mrs. Carrie E. Cope of Topeka, Kansas gave a splendid address on "How to double the membership and increase the interest of Home Missionary Work" and gave her personal experience of how she was won for Christ, by a home missionary. She also spoke of the plans her home society had of raising the money for her home missions, and of organizing the different young peoples societies.

Mrs. W. E. Rowe of Coal Grove gave the recitation "The Missionary Box," by request. The treasurer reported $15.00 in treasury. The afternoon session was opened by Mrs. Klee, with Mrs. Eason conducting the devotional exercises. The minutes of the morning session were read by Mrs. E. L. Todd.

Miss Pearl Crawford recited "Christ's Measure of Service," Mrs. Stockham gave the report of the mite box offering. The nominating committee reported the following officers to be elected:

President, Mrs. Laura Klee of Ironton.

First Vice-President, Mrs. Nora Harwood of Portsmouth.

Second Vice-President, Mrs. Charles Amann of Portsmouth.

Third Vice-President, Mrs. Pickrel of Jackson.

Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Trenthart of Portsmouth.

Recording Secretary, Mrs. E. L. Todd of Ironton.

Treasurer, Mrs. J. O. Yates of Ironton.

Committee on literature, Mrs. Sellards of Portsmouth.

Committee on Supplies, Mrs. Belle Higgins, Coal Grove.

Secretary of Young People's Work, Mrs. John Cook of Ironton.

The following delegates besides those mentioned above were present: Mrs. Seeds, Ohio Conference secretary of Columbus; Mrs. Ely of Delaware, secretary of literature; Mrs. Irene Delay, Mrs. J. H. McClure, Mrs. J. S. Ridenour of Jackson; Mrs. C. W. Rice, Mrs. J. T. Breece, Miss Verona B. Graham, Mrs. W. L. Bayless, Mrs. H. C. Salyards, Mrs. J. W. Flood and Miss Trenthart of Portsmouth; Mrs. H. C. Gunnett, Mrs. Lida Patterson, Mrs. W. E. Rowe and Miss Rose Fax of Coal Grove, and Mrs. Lulu McClain of Uniontown, Pa., a visitor.

In the evening Mrs. Cope gave a most delightful talk upon the expanse of the missionary work, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Socialist Column

ROBT. DODGE.

A true Socialist is not a knocker. Socialists should be better union men than those union men who are opposed to Socialism, and Socialists who are members of the church should strive to show themselves better christians than any others. Although the Socialist believes the place to strike is at the ballot box, yet he will be found standing with the workers in all their strikes and battles.

Socialism is a positive, constructive force and its greatest message is unity, and the Socialist points to the trusts to illustrate the marvelous possibilities of concerted action. The United Cigar Stores Company was organized but a few years ago, as reported, with less than a million dollars of Common stock and later this was increased by the directors to nine millions and that stock is now worth 100 per cent. premium in the market. This company now has about 800 retail stores bought with the proceeds of bonds sold that never cost the promoters a cent, yet for the last year they claim a profit of $2000 for each store. Now how can the individual small business man meet such competition as that. He simply has to go to the wall or sell out to the trust. The tobacco trust is destined to absorb the whole business for it can produce for less than the individual because the trust methods have the greater economy. At the present time the machinery for controlling the drug stores of the country is being organized and the tobacco trust is going to be in on the deal. And so it goes in every line of business and there is nothing in the way of man-made laws that can prevent for the reason that this development is in the line of progress and is the result of economic evolution and therefore in accord with natures laws.

The tending of the trusts to absorb everything in sight is apparent to many wealthy business and professional men whose economic interests would seemingly be on the side of the exploiters of labor, but who having the greatest good to the greatest number in mind are daily embracing Socialism as offering the only peaceable solution of the problem. Yet thousands of our fellow citizens are looking to the return of Roosevelt on June 21st as the beginning of the downfall of the trusts. We note that Cornelius Vanderbilt is chairman of the Roosevelt reception committee and every other member thereof is a capitalist. Do these men look upon Roosevelt as a trust buster? No, indeed. They know better. It is only the unthinking that expect him to save them from the trusts.

The common people are slowly waking to the fact that they have let the earth get away from them. But as the comet has disappeared and we still live, it is not too late to recall. The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof, and all the people have to do is to recapture it and hold it for the common good for all time to come; and to accomplish that they will have to inaugurate Socialism.

Capitalism goes on the principle that production exists for the purpose of trade and traffic; that is for profit, and therefore capitalism produces parasites and poverty. Socialism proceeds on the principle that production should be solely for use. Socialism would produce prosperity for all and leave out the parasites.

Mr. Henry Clews, in his address before the bankers convention last week, dwelt a great deal on liberty. Liberty needs to be carefully defined. It is often confounded with license, or lack of law. This is the liberty Mr. Clews wants for the few who control the great trusts but it spells tyranny for the masses. But true liberty is not license; it is the opportunity of the individual to develop his own life, to be himself. When we reach Lincoln's ideal, a government for the people, by the people we will have liberty in its truest sense, but we are a long way from his ideal today.

The lack of economic freedom leads to the loss of political freedom. The writer was told of a certain employer in the last presidential election who said to his workmen that if a certain candidate was elected we will raise wages; but if his opponent is elected we will close the shop. Of course you are free men: vote just exactly as you please. Dare economic slaves use their political liberty? If political freedom is to endure the masses must be freed from economic slavery.

VIEW OF TOWN OF SALERNO...DAMAGED BY EARTHQUAKE.

POLITICAL GOSSIP

Next week there will be two important Democratic conventions. The senatorial convention will be held in Portsmouth Tuesday, June 14th, and the circuit judicial convention will be held in Chillicothe on Wednesday June 15th. Both conventions promise to be extremely interesting and well attended.

So far there is but one avowed candidate for state senator, Mr. J. I. Hudson, of this city, who was endorsed by the Scioto convention and who has the solid support of the Democrats of the county. So far no candidates have been announced from the other counties, although it is possible Jackson and Adams may each present names for consideration. The general feeling is that the candidate should come from Scioto or Jackson, with Scioto preferred, and Major Hudson's chances for the nomination are most excellent.

In the circuit convention two names have been mentioned—Judge Abernethy, of Circleville, and Oscar W. Newman, of Portsmouth. Mr. Newman has been urged by friends all over the district to become a candidate and if he consents to the use of his name will undoubtedly be nominated. He would make a strong candidate and come nearer being elected than any other man in the circuit district.

Speaking of the circuit court, the Chillicothe News-Advertiser rises to remark that political trading has made it the "Circus Court," rather than the circuit court. There are two politicians now on the bench in Jones and Walters, and a third politician was nominated in Sayre, of Athens. At the recent convention in Chillicothe Judge Jones was represented by three brothers who controlled Jackson county and used that delegation with an eye single to his interests. On the Pickaway county delegation and voting it was Barton Walters, a son of Judge Walters. Sayre, the man nominated, has a great reputation in the Eleventh district as a politician, but as a lawyer he is an unknown quantity. Should he be elected the court might well be named the "circus court." Its members can have a three-ring political show every day in the year.

Mr. Clark and his Scioto county delegation to the circuit convention, of sad memory, claim to have a potent pull at Washington and poor old John Robbins, of Jackson, is to be made a victim of that pull—maybe. They say Mr. Clark and his friends—that they are going to see to it that Robbins is never confirmed as postmaster at Jackson by way of a little revenge for Edwin Jones giving Brother Clark that toss-up. Robbins is not losing any sleep. He seems to think Mr. Clark's pole does not reach outside of Scioto county.

Parson Jones, of the Oak Hill Press, who serves the Lord on Sundays and the devil on week-days, is stirred to wrath because the Prohibition crowd in Jackson county has endorsed Woodrow, the Democratic candidate for representative. Parson says it was a mistake, that they should have nominated a Prohibitionist or an independent whom Republicans, disgusted with Homer Hunt's candidacy, could have supported. He says lots of Jackson Republicans would not vote for a Democrat under any consideration, but they do not want to vote for Hunt. Furthermore, Parson intimates that a few losses stole the Jackson Prohibition convention, held it on the q. t. and ignored the most of the party. All of which so moved the good-Lord—good-devil editor that he clean forgot to hurl his weekly shaft at Senator Dan't Webster Williams.

The word comes from Jackson county that our esteemed friend, Homer Hunt, Esq., Republican candidate for representative, scared one George M. Canter out of seven years' growth the other day. When Mr. Hunt read in this valuable journal wherein Mr. Canter was quoted as to the kind of men Jackson county Republicans would not send to the legislature, Mr. Hunt was stirred to wrath. Mounting his trusty steed he hastened to the home of Mr. Canter and announced his intention of securing an apology or administering a thrashing p. d. q. Brother Canter is a man of peace and did not want a thrashing. And so he apologized and made denials—at least, so Hunt and his friends say. Anyway Homer rode back to Jackson somewhat mollified. If Homer is curious and will ride down to Portsmouth, he can be furnished with an affidavit, duly signed, witnessed and sealed, that Canter said just what he was quoted as saying.

The esteemed Gallipolis Journal is sore as a boil over the defeat of Mattere Benam for state senator by L. R. Andrews. It charges Benam's defeat to the use of boodle and other nefarious practices beyond the pale of good and virtuous politics. So surprising to think that good and true Republican delegations would listen to the lure of the tempter with the slithy lures of the realm!

That promised interview with the Hon. Nate B. Gilliland on the wet and dry issue has to be postponed until another day. Brother Gilliland, may his soul live in peace, was "not at home" each time the humble seeker after truth called at his sanctum. We know the Hon. Nate was "not at home" one time for we distinctly heard him tell his office boy to tell us so.

"Heaven help what is left of the canals if George Watkins don't get back on the board," said a well-informed man the other day. "He is the only one there who does any work or knows anything about our peerless waterways. 'Barney' Baldwin puts in his time figuring out his salary, and 'Bill' Kirtley would not know a canal boat from an electric mule."

It is said that Mr. Watkins will undoubtedly land the nomination if Cox, of Cincinnati, does not rear up on his hind legs and kick up a muss.

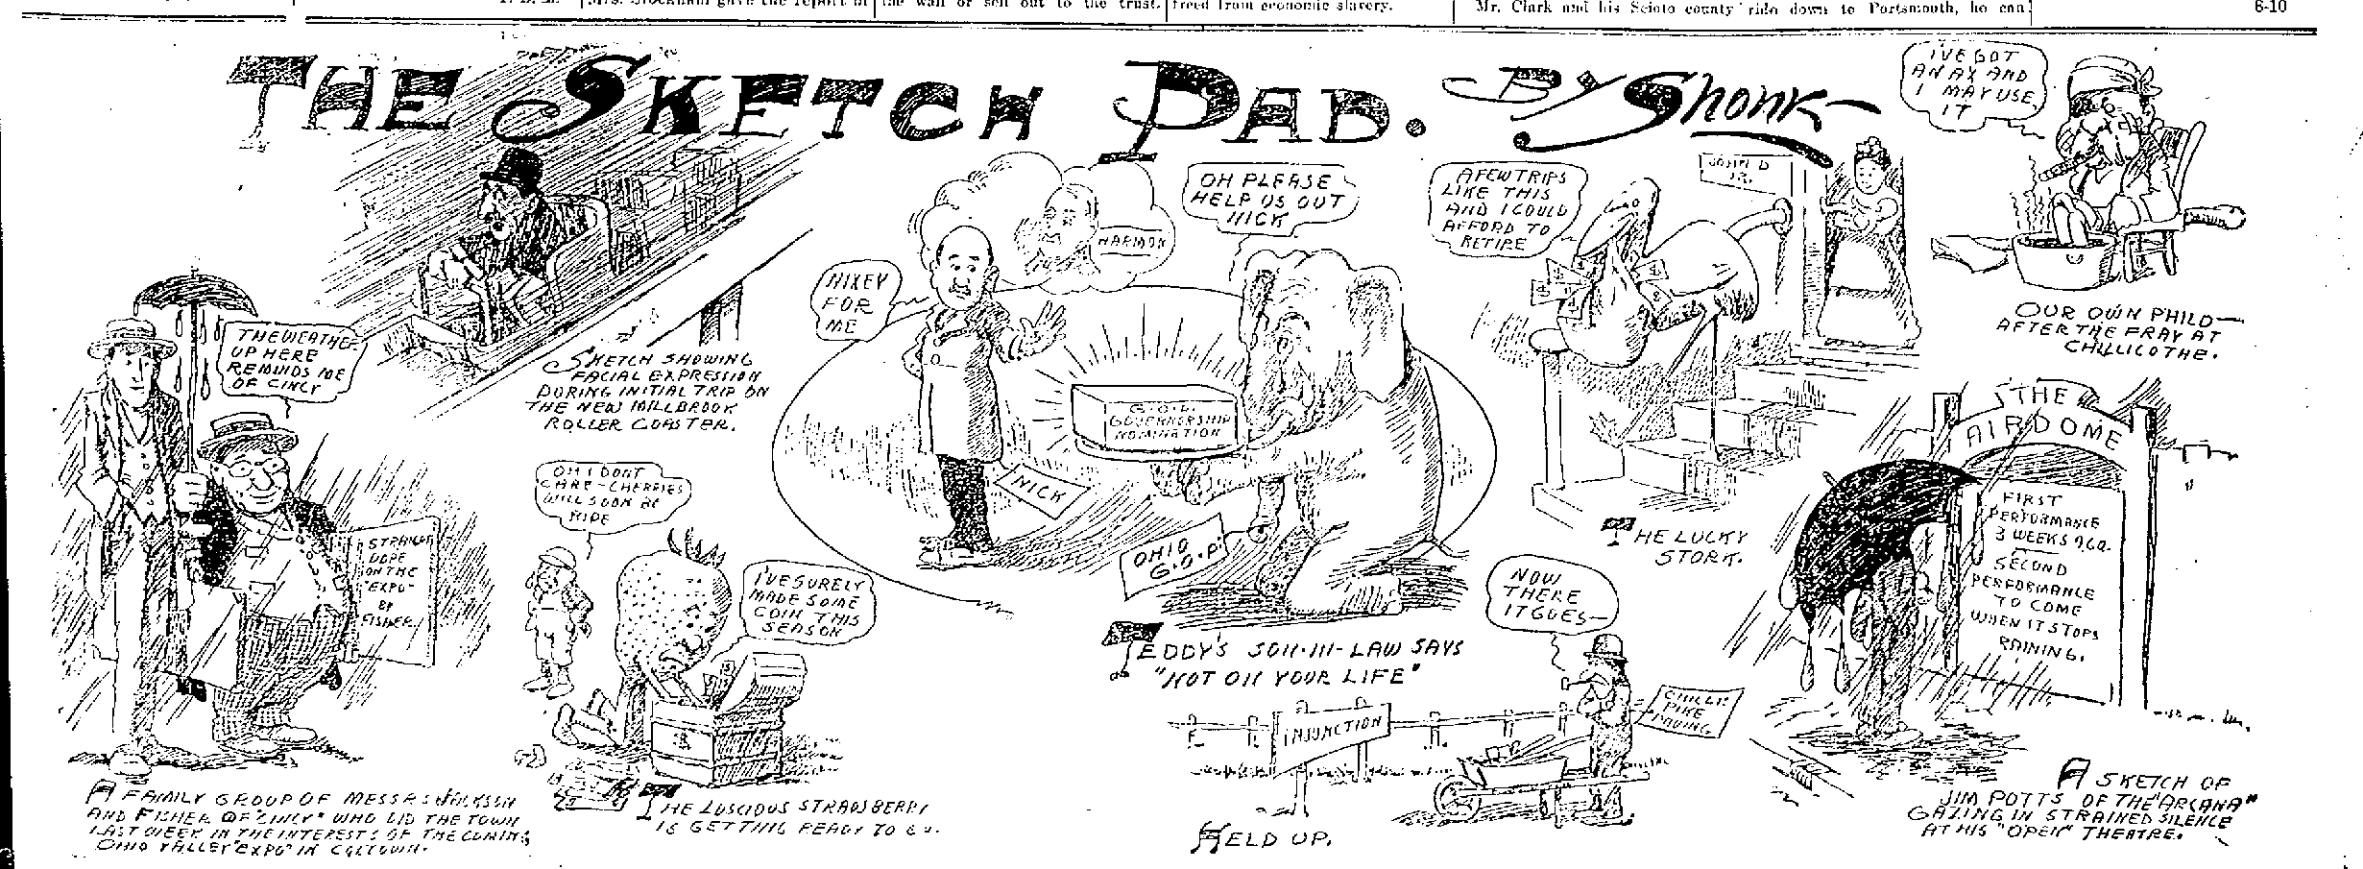

Our excellent friend, Editor Sibley, of the Gallipolis Tribune, after mature consideration, has expressed himself as being in favor of large families. The Gallipolis editor has grown very learned and profound since he turned his thoughts from wicked politicians towards nobler, purer things. But whatever his sphere, Sibley is never dull. There's some consolation in that.

Capt. and Mrs. George W. Davis, of Fullerton, went to Pratt, Ky., Friday, to visit with their daughter, Mrs. Nola Forgy, until Monday.

WILD ROSE DESIGN for PILLOW CASE END

I AM GLAD to be able to fill a number of requests in the one design today, and to promise for next week an adaptation of the same wild rose for use as a pillow sham corner and various other household purposes.

The lovers of fine linen are many, and it is especially to them that I offer the scalloped edge, with its accompanying design of wild roses and leaves, for use on the end of a pillow or bolster case. Every good housekeeper takes a certain pride in a well-filled linen closet and in an assortment of pretty linen for upstairs purposes. Presently I shall suggest other uses for the spray of roses, but first let me say that it is especially planned so that it will fit the opening of the most popular-sized pillow case and bolster case. The scallops may be run still further along, if the pillow case be unusually wide, and also the scallops may be omitted along the back of the pillow case, where a deep hem will be substituted for them.

Should the embroiderer prefer, the spray may be used upon a hemstitched pillow case; and it is to be remembered that the same spray can be stamped on a sheet to fold down over the counterpane: its edge may be hemstitched or scalloped across.

Now, this same design will do just as well for towel ends, for a splasher, for a bureau scarf or a table runner. It may, indeed, be used for the lower edge of bedroom window hangings, or for the valance at the top of a window, or even as a repeat on the valance of a bed.

One floral design repeated throughout the room may be very effective, or, if it prove monotonous, the single wild rose can be used as a separate all-over design for many articles in the summer bedroom.

Should it be your idea to use the flower or the spray in colors upon crash or linen, choose a dull, leaf-green cotton and a very deep rose shade, to allow for the fading that will eventually take place.

Work all of the stems in well-done outline, the leaves solid and the roses in skeleton stitch, to leave space for the solid center surrounded by French knots.

The design is so made that the very center of it provides a suitable place for an initial, but so proportioned that its omission will not leave an unpleasant bareness.

Designed by MARY V. FOX

The Design and the Scalloped Edge . . .

An English Idea

WHAT is known as a "Dorothy bag" in England is often made of a wornout tall silk hat. Begin by cutting the hat close to the brim all round, and then slip off the silk covering; it will be found to be already in shape of a convenient bag, and merely in need of a lining of colored silk, which can be made by cutting a disk the same size as the circle at the top of the hat, allowing for narrow turnings. The sides are the same size and depth as the outer covering, and the silk lining, being made separate, is put inside the outer covering; the edges of the latter are turned down an inch and the former turned in to meet the raw edge and just cover it. Small brass or bone rings are sewn inside, eighteen being needed, at intervals; a piece of silk cord is passed through the rings, allowing enough to draw up to form two handles, and it is then sewn together at the ends, the bag being thus completed. Old tall hats can frequently be found in the attic, and satisfaction lies in using them.

For Spanish Lace

IT IS altogether possible to give a new lease of life to handsome Spanish lace that shows signs of wearing by transferring the figures to a new net ground. If the lace is black and rusty, freshen it by dipping lightly in coffee or vinegar and water. Very handsome lace should be dyed; then, with the new grounding, it is better than new. Fill in openings with lace stitches—they are not hard to learn. Where time is plenty and patience abounds, something rather wonderful may be achieved by holding a fine gold thread around the lace figures, of either black or white, and overcasting it firmly but sparsely with embroidery silk, either matching the lace or the thing it is meant finally to adorn.

Skirt Making

IN MAKING the new five-gore skirt with very little fulness below (this is the Parisian skirt of the moment), it is necessary so to fit it over the hips that all extra fulness is taken from each gore, and thus the position of each seam will not be changed.

In other words, do not push all of the extra fulness into the central back box pleat and thus crowd the added weight to this one spot.

With Ball and Loop

TO CLOSE the summer wrap over the chest, we have now a clasp very suggestive of those used on the Indian necklace—a loop of dull gold cord through which is slipped a good-sized ball formed of the cord and held on to the opposite side of the cape by a single strand of the same metallic cord.

SOME OLD-FASHIONED EMBROIDERIES

A NEEDLEWORK revival of great interest to women of the present time is from the period of the Italian renaissance; an influence that is felt in dress also of this season.

The designs, strong and at the same time dignified, rely upon color for their effectiveness, although in some cases the bright tones can be abandoned and white resorted to.

There is nothing particularly new in the matter of stitches, the satin stitch and outlining being everyday occurrences in needlecraft. Cotton is perhaps more durable; but if silk be used, shorter stitches must be taken, as silk has a tendency to roughen with contact.

Birds and flowers are combined in the designs of this period; the lion and the dragon are extremely decorative for cushions, curtains, table scarfs and other furnishings of the home beautiful, while the Italian urn for the center, with its conventional buds and plant, is suggested for cross-stitching.

Speaking of cross-stitching recalls the samplers of grandmother's days; but the woman of today plies her needle not in the working out of mottoes, but in the decorating of her garments. Cross-stitching is beautiful when following conventional designs, the effect always, of course, being enhanced by good color combinations. Linen thread, worsted, coarse cottons and even string are suggested for clever fingers. Coarse meshes of material serve as the square background upon which a design can be quickly worked.

Old-fashioned Madeira work is once more in the front ranks. The grouping of eyelets in circles, flower clusters or curved lines is most effective and, as it sounds, easily worked out. Medallions and motifs of Madeira work are effective if combined with colored materials in forming cushions, curtains or covers. In this way the work is decidedly decreased, while the effect is comparatively as good as ever.

The use of the embroidery stitches of other days is certainly worth the consideration of the enterprising woman. Old cedar chests furnish ideas that are most valuable to needleworkers of all stages of inclination and experience.

CORONATION BRAID

ALL of those who are wedded to the use of coronation braid will find renewed demand for that favorite little article in its present combination with Irish and cluny insertions and edges.

There is a certain generous quality about this wavy braid, with its light and heavy patches, that enhances almost any piece of work to which it is applied.

For use on handsome summer frocks, it is now variously combined with laces to make straight strips of trimming or medallions. These last are extremely simple, and may be used for dress decorations, or to edge household linens such as centerpieces and bureau scarfs or sash curtains.

A half-inch center is crocheted with a steel crochet hook and medium fine thread on a beginning consisting of three chain stitches. To the half-inch disk sew sixteen petals made of a continuous row of coronation braid of that number known as "small coronation." Each petal will consist of two of the heavy portions, the turns being made on the slender spaces. This will produce a perfect daisy, and now there is crocheted fast to its outer edge a tiny insertion of thread looking like the ladder pattern.

Straight strips of trimming also are formed in much the same way. To make an insertion, each alternate end or space in the braid is crocheted fast to the ladder work as it is made, and then the opposite slender spaces are crocheted fast to a second row of ladder work, thus forming a complete insertion.

By carrying out the first work described for the insertion and then joining to the alternate slender spaces a row of scallops, there may be made an edging.

It will be discovered by the willing worker that there are almost endless possibilities for the use of coronation braid, and that both the insertion and the medallion offer shape and space for intricate development.

A Wooden Bodkin

A WOODEN match or toothpick may be made to replace the missing bodkin by merely folding over its point an end of the tape or ribbon and then turning the stick so that its whole length is wrapped.

It will then run through the casing without danger of loss of the ribbon.

A Tray Cloth

IN THE first place, a tray cloth should fit exactly the tray for which it is designed. Lay the tray over paper and trace the outline of the bottom of it, or draw the design upon linen material and with a small stiletto punch the holes, if your aim be the effective Madeira work, being careful to secure small and even openings. Now bind, very evenly, each hole in the regular eyelet stitch and finish the edge with simple scallops. Of course, the design depends upon the neatness and accuracy of stitch, and the amount of work is regulated largely by the time of the maker; but whether few eyelets or many, the charm of this simple embroidery is indisputable.

Figured Ties

BY WAY of a fashionable touch on the plain brown or blue linen suit, the tie with paisley pattern in its silk weave is a delightful relief.

For brown have a silk tie showing varied brown and cream tones with a touch of leafy green.

On the pale ecru linen or the gray suit use a soft-toned silk, having in its paisley pattern a showing of rich lavender, and to wear with any of the shades of blue the regular oriental cashmere patterns will give a gorgeous touch that is upheld by the fashion makers. Royal blue, deep dull red and orange usually appear in the eastern cashmere.

The Button Rose

THE wreath of button roses will figure on many a summery garden party frock, whether it be of sheer white or of a delicate color.

These dainty flowers will add the color touch and will catch the festoon on the tunic and on the sleeve, as well as hold in place the fulness of the bodice or fasten the girdle and the fichu.

The artificial button rose may be got for no great price at certain times of the year by watching the millinery sales; or, again, the small silk rose or ribbon bud may be made by the home embroiderer who is deft of finger.

Ribbon bought by the piece, particularly three-quarter-inch gauze ribbon, will make the most attractive of flowers.

Concerning Buttons

WHEN sewing on buttons, put the thread through before you lay the button on the garment, so that the knot will be on the right side. That leaves it under the button and prevents it from being ironed or worn away, and thus beginning the loosening process. Before you begin sewing, lay a large pin across the button, so that the threads go over the pin. After you have finished filling the holes, draw out the pin and wind the thread round and round beneath the button. This makes a stem to sustain the pulling and wear of the buttonhole.

Dutch Figures in Delft Blue

A Knitting Bag . . .

To Hold the Darning . . .

For Buttons . . .

DELFT embroidery is new, and is most attractive in its cool [illegible] of tone for the summer room. It is nearly all worked in dull blue of several shades upon a sort of coarse butcher's linen, so nearly white that it can scarcely be called cream.

All of these bags are faced with the lighter of the three shades of blue and drawn up with corresponding ribbons.

It must be remembered that the choice of color is as important a factor in this work as is the design, if the finished product is to resemble Delft ware.

Varying but slightly in [illegible] and general effect, the three bags show each a different little Dutch figure, two of them knitting, the other merely a face, and all of them done in a combination of stitches, including outline, solid, skeleton, catstitch and [illegible] work.

They are used to their best advantage in the carrying out of [illegible] of the design, as are also the several shades of blue.

Dutch figures [illegible] are [illegible] out [illegible] work [illegible]

A [illegible] which [illegible]

is the standing or seated figure of a woman knitting. She is characteristic of her country—a thrifty housemother providing for her family by primitive means.

All of these figures are treated by that method known to the decorative artist, a method that outlines its most impressive parts with a single darker line. In this case it is accomplished by outlining.

One of the bags is intended for darning, one for knitting, another for buttons, and like designs may be applied to [illegible] of workbags or to many pieces [illegible] in the bedrooms of summer cottages.

The action of the play takes place in the library of Sir Philip's home. Time: The present.

The new Millbrook Company is the talk of the town. Everyone agrees that it is by far the finest Stock Organization ever brought to Portsmouth, and its members will soon be as popular here as they have been in other cities where they have played. It is most gratifying to know that the endeavor to provide a high order of amusement to Casino patrons, has met with such prompt and emphatic approval.

Of course the general regret was the inclement weather which caused hundreds of patrons to miss "Lady Huntworth's Experiment." Had the nights been warm and dry, the audiences would have been limited only by the capacity of the theatre. This fact was made known by the great number of seat reservations made during the days, in the hope that the weather might clear, and cancelled at the last moment, when rain persisted in falling.

For the third week, commencing Monday, June 20th, Mr. Bertholet announces the most ambitious production in the history of this theatre, when the Millbrook Company will present Arthur Wing Pinero's fantastic comedy, "The Amazons."

This is the masterpiece of the greatest living dramatist, and has been played all over the world. The greatest success, however, achieved by this farcical romance, has been in America, where its triumph was immediate. The freshness, delicate humor and unconventionality of the piece, and the quaint prettiness of the girls' masculine attire, captivated the playgoers of New York and "The Amazons" became a sensation.

At The Orpheum.

When the Ashai troupe of five Japanese magicians and noviates take the stage for the closing of the big bill at the Orpheum, every house employe, every other member of the bill and all persons save the Japs themselves, will be excluded from the stage. Actors and notorines who may be back of the curtain must, according to the contract, be locked in their dressing rooms as long as the magic portion of the act is on, and no American is allowed to profane their great silk curtain or touch their baggage after it is on the stage. These restrictions were imposed and sound in the most solemn of Japanese oaths, or rites, before Ashai and his troupe of five people could be permitted to take the act from the Flowery kingdom, and, Ashai being a true Theosophist, as we Occidentals call the followers of Confucius, respects his pact with almost cruel rigidity. In Springfield the other day, where the troupe was playing, a thoughtless stage hand conceived the brilliant idea of "copping" the game. He will know better next time, for, strange as it may seem, Ashai seemed to divine his intention, and caught him red-handed stowed away in the scene dock far above their heads, and sent a member of his troupe to the loft with the polite but positive injunction that should he not at once get out in the front of the house the contract would be invalidated and no performance would follow. After a mild but memorable session with Mr. Sun the stage hand was permitted to retain his position, but was requested to make profuse apologies to the Japanese for his great breach of etiquette, the Japs having an elegant conception of the niceties of the code. So if you see a general exodus of stage hands when the Jap act comes on next Monday, or in fact, any time next week, you may know that Ashai is protecting his oath, by going to the Orpheum. Other acts on the bill next week will be the National Novelty Trio; Lester and Kellett, in travesty, and Davidson, the only one of his kind in vaudeville.

The Daughters of the Confederacy in Cincinnati gave a theatre party in compliment to Mrs. Gen. George E. Pickett, during her Cincinnati engagement. When "Dixie" was played the house exploded. Mrs. Pickett was overwhelmed with flowers.

At Albany, N. Y., on June 3, the Green Employment Agency Bill, which is the White Rats' Measure, was given a hearing before Governor Hughes.

Among the prominent White Rats present who spoke on the matter were: Dennis O'Brien, Harry Mountford, George Murphy, Assemblyman Green, who introduced the bill; Mrs. Beaumont Packard, Tim Cronin and others.

Henry W. Taft and Morris Goodman, representatives of the United Booking Offices, said that the bill was unconstitutional and discriminated against the large theatrical booking agents.

Shubert and Bimberg ("Bim the Button Man") made a contract in 1905, by which Bimberg agreed to build a theatre on the Northwest corner of Seventh Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, New York City, and lease it to Shubert. In the event of his failure to carry out the agreement Bimberg agreed to forfeit the sum of $25,000.

The court, last week, found that Bimberg broke the agreement and entered into another with Wagenhals & Kemper to lease them the theatre. Bimberg died and Shubert brought suit against Leopold Sonheim, as executor of the Bimberg estate.

Sarah Bernhardt's last visit to America will be made under the management of William F. Connor. Her American tour will open in Chicago on Oct. 31. She will play two engagements at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York City, for four weeks in December, and the other the last week of her tour in this country, when she will make her final bow to the American public.

Mr. Connor has arranged a tour for Madame Bernhardt in the houses controlled by Frohman, Klaw & Erlanger.

During the last week, "The Princess Leontine," by Edward Rostand, also "Faust," by the same author, will be given by Madame Bernhardt, prior to her departure for Paris, where she will begin her season with both plays.

Well Known Daughters of Famous Men

MISS JULIA A. HERNE.

The eldest of the four daughters of James A. Herne, actor and playwright, is Miss Julia Herne, who was born in Boston in October, 1881. Following in her father's footsteps, she won recognition first by her acting and afterward by her playwriting.

As was to be expected, Miss Herne made her debut on the stage under her father's direction. Her first role was that of the leading woman character, Ann Berry, in her father's play "Shore Acres," and in this role she alternated with Miss Marion Cullen. She also played the juvenile role of Perley in the same play.

In her second year on the stage she again appeared in one of her father's plays, "The Rev. Griffith Davenport." In this superb play of civil war times her father, mother and her sister, Chrystal Herne, also appeared. The three years that followed were spent in her father's company in his play "Sag Harbor."

A long contract with Klaw & Erlanger followed, and began with an engagement with Dan Daly, with whom she appeared at Daly's Theatre in "John Henry." A season with "Ben Hur" followed, in which she appeared as Esther. In the Klaw & Erlanger production of "Home Folks" she again appeared with her sister.

It was in the spring of 1905 that Miss Herne's first play was produced at the Manhattan Theatre, in New York. This drama, "Richter's Wife," was written in the modern manner and showed the same keen observation of life that made her father's dramas so effective. Ibsen's influence was also apparent in its effect on the mentality and technical skill of the young dramatist, who nevertheless spoke with her own individual voice and showed promise which is steadily maturing.

MISS JULIA A. HERNE

Her more recent dramatic work includes "A Modern Cinderella," which Miss Herne herself used in vaudeville, and a playlet, "Between the Acts," in which Miss Chrystal Herne appeared.

A new comedy from her pen, called "Managing Sylvia," will be produced by the Lieblers next season, with Miss Chyrstal Herne in the leading role. Several other plays contracted for production next season are now in process of construction by Miss Herne.

Maude Adams made her first appearance as Rosalind Monday night, June 6, in a notable out-of-door production of "As You Like It," given in the Greek Theatre of the University of California, under the auspices of the college English department.

It has been Miss Adams' ambition to play Rosalind since 1899, when she played her first Shakespearean role in Juliet. Success in other roles prevented the fulfillment of this purpose year after year. In 1905 Charles Frohman had a production of "As You Like It" in preparation for Miss Adams. Some of the scenery and properties were actually finished when along came "Peter Pan," and for three years she had little time for anything else. the intended production have been used in the performance at Berkeley.

Eugene Walter has signed a contract with the Messrs. Shubert. He will write three plays for them, entitled "For Rent," "The Guerillas" and "The Cheaters." Another of Mr. Walter's plays, called "Boots and Saddles," will be produced early next Autumn.

David Belasco announced last week that he is at work upon the production of "The Merchant of Venice," in which David Warfield will act Shylock. This will be given next season, during the holidays. Mr. Belasco will also make a special production of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," with a notable cast. He also announced that his policy next season will be to produce a greater number of plays than during any one previous Winter.

On June 1 papers were filed in Albany, N. Y., by John Cort, Chas. Klein, the playwright, E. V. Giroux and others, incorporating the Independent Producing Company, with a paid up capital of $100,000.

The Independent Producing Company, whose contract with Mr. Klein is for a period of five years, intends to retain the exclusive services of the playwright as a producing manager in the production of any plays produced by the company under other contracts by authors which may be acquired from time to time. Mr. Klein will also furnish at least one play of his own each year during the life of this contract. John Cort states that a new play by Mr. Klein will be produced in New York before November next.

Maud Allan the barefoot dancer, sailed for England on June 1. She is to return to this country next year, and will appear at the Palace Theatre in London during the Summer.

Before sailing Miss Allan said that she had an entirely new artistic departure planned for the following year. She says that she will devote her attention to the drama and will make her first appearance in London in one of the tragic plays of the repertory of Sarah Bernhardt, at the end of next year. Miss Allan has so far had no experience as an actress.

The Messrs Shubert announce that they have acquired the producing rights to a new modern play of today, by the well known dramatist, George Broadhurst. The play, which is described as being similar in scope and treatment to Clyde Fitch's "The City," will be one of the early Autumn offerings under the Shubert management.

Clara Morris' sight has been rapidly failing, and she is now nearly blind. Mr. Harriott, her husband, states that at a recent consultation of eight noted eye specialists the hope of saving his wife's sight was abandoned. One of the doctors deemed the trouble to be of a muscular character, and thought it possible to effect a cure. He was alone in his opinion, however.

Mollie Revel, the actress, who was associated with Clara Morris in "Camille" and other plays, visited the home of the Harriotts, at Yonkers, N. Y., on June 3, but owing to a turn for the worse in Mrs. Harriott's condition, she could not see her.

Plans have been filed for making alterations to the New York Hippodrome at a cost of $10,000. The alterations consist of tearing out all the mechanism, coils, etc., installed for the purpose of cooling the place, and converting that space for use as dressing rooms; the construction of new gangways from second story to dressing rooms in the wings, building new iron stairways and putting up additional fire-escapes.

Otis Skinner, with Mrs. Skinner and their daughter, Cornelia, sailed for France June 3 for their Summer home near Marseilles. Mrs. and Miss Skinner will remain there for the Summer, while Mr. Skinner will join Charles Frohman in London to discuss plans for next season. Later in the season he will visit Oberammergau in company with Mr. and Mrs. William H. Crane, Hattie Williams, J. M. Barrie and Mr. Frohman.

That 'Frame Up' Story Has Not The Proper Ring

California Governor Would Hardly Be Likely to Say Something While Visiting That He wouldn't say at Home.

(By JOLTUM BIGMYTT.)

It is not surprising that the governor of California denied the interview attributed to him in Chicago, in which he asserted his belief that the coming fight between Jeffries and Johnson is a "frame up."

For one I can't see where the logic of the interview comes in. It looks decidedly doubtful that the governor would wait until he had crossed half over the continent to say something about which he would be decidedly more likely to free his opinion at home.

Taking the record of California's governor since he has been in office, it would be safe to venture an opinion that he would call a spade a spade in California much more likely than he would discuss spades when he got out of his own state.

If he thought that the fight were a "frame up" he would not stop long to tell the folks of California his belief. I don't gather any particular reason for the governor trying to create a sensation for the benefit of a Chicago reporter, and unless the Chicago reporter is one who is thoroughly reliable and not addicted to interviews for the furtherance of the cause of free and untrammelled space, it is just possible that he permitted his imagination to roam on a limited thought express.

Jeffries Always Honest.

Getting down to the other side of the question, the possibility of a "frame up," it seems only fair to look at the matter from the standpoint of Jeffries. He is a fighter who has been honest and above board in what he has done in the ring. His opponent has admitted that he has not always traded in straight goods, but there is nothing which attaches to Jeffries except pugilistic honesty [illegible] and I don't believe he has been mixed in any attempt to bring about a "frame up" in this [illegible]

If he is [illegible] son and strong [illegible] endurance is [illegible] be and his punch [illegible] was when he [illegible] the kind of [illegible] take any chan[illegible]

More than that, Jeffries [illegible] desire to be beaten. [illegible] that and stick to it like [illegible] He didn't start on this training [illegible] with any intention of being whipped by a black man, and if he is beaten there will not be a madder and a more disgusted individual on the Pacific slope.

The one feature about the fight which, in common with many others, I did not like from the start, was the manner in which the negotiations were put through in New York. There was too much in evidence to warrant the belief that the fight would go where the principals wished it to go, regardless of any bids that might be made. When the final arrangements were effected and there was a star chamber session on the other side of the river, and a lot of talk about bids for the picture privilege, which would surpass in value any which had been made in the history of the ring, I liked the manner of negotiations even less.

The fighters and their crowd had given plenty of reasons for the public to believe that the match would take place for the value of the pictures, no matter what else might happen.

There was too much of that picture talk. There has been a lot too much commercialism about the match all the way through, but I can't see where the principals are any more at fault than a curious American public, which continues to patronize some of this cheap stuff when it is pulled off, and which can thank only its own credulity for providing the occasion for sharp witted men to arrange schemes to fleece the novelty hunters of their money.

If the fighters ever get within the ring in San Francisco and the gong sounds for the first round to begin I am going to venture to say that James J. Jeffries will be in that ring for business, and if he finds that he can whip Johnson in the first round, or the second, or the third, or any other old round, he is going to do so.

It's his previous record and a personal acquaintance with the fighter ever since he was training down on the New Jersey shore to try to win the championship—which he eventually did—that [illegible] that belief.

Under certain conditions Johnson's previous record might militate against him [illegible] [illegible] Jeffries [illegible] it will be a long, long time before "Lil' Arthur" will get another chance to fight some [illegible] [illegible] acquainted with the fact than "Lil' Arthur." [illegible]

Lucasville to Play Giants

The [illegible] Giants of Portsmouth will attempt to beat the Lucasville team at the Fair Grounds Sunday afternoon. The game will be called at 1:15 p. m. Everybody come.—Lucasville Gazette.

Second Sackers Best Sluggers

Second basemen have been the best average hatters in the big leagues for over a decade. It is the popular belief that the outfielders are the sluggers. So they are in many cases, but there are three fielding jobs to one second position. Take almost any squad and you will generally find the second baseman as high a hitter as any two of the gardeners, and in some instances better than all three. This has come to be such a uniform fact that all keystone players are falling into line.

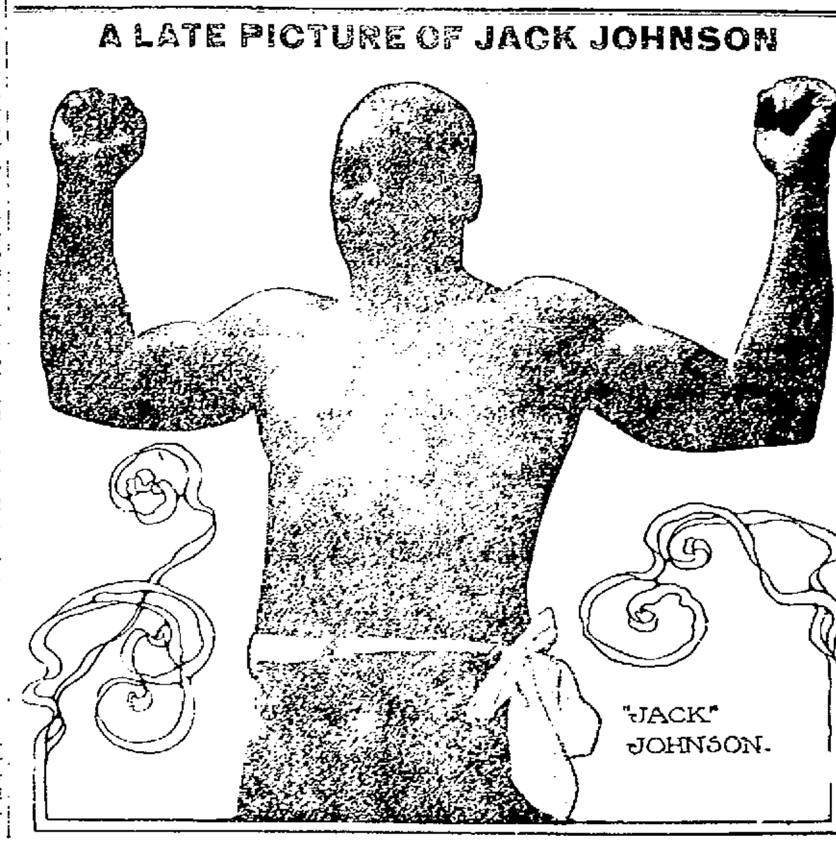

One of the greatest batters of the past ten years is Nap Lajoie, of Cleveland. When he was with the National League he was renowned as a slugger, and the same is true since he joined Cleveland. He probably is the best known of the hard hitting second basemen, having led the batters in certain years. It seems that the better a fielding second baseman the man is the better hitter he is. Johnny Evers, of the Cubs, ranks up among the leaders of the former world's champions. He has hit well over .300, and always is feared by the opposing pitcher. For a light chap he is a demon hitter.

Take Collins, of the Athletics. He was one of the sensations of the past season, both in hitting and in fielding. He is one of the latest examples of the rule and a fine one to boot. He gives promise of even greater things. Then there is Delahanty, of the Detroit Tigers. It was in a large measure due to his work towards the fag end of the season that the Detroits copped the American league pennant. His batting and fielding boosted the stock of the Michigan bunch. When he was with the Washingtons he was the star batter, and, with Johnson, the pitcher, formed the best pair the Nationals possessed. He is one of the best batters of the American league, or any league, for that matter.

Then there is Doyle, of the Giants a rattling good hitter and second baseman. When he went to New York from the Three-I league he set the fans crazy with his continual hitting prowess. His presence has been a stimulus to the other Giant players.

The St. Louis Nationals have secured Miller Huggins from the Cincinnatis. Not long ago, when Miller was in his prime, he took his hat off to nobody as a hitter or a fielder. The Red fans would bet their last cent on him. He should have many more years of usefulness in him and his presence should go a long way toward gingering up the Cardinals. Then there is Ferris, who formerly played second with the Boston Pilgrims, and who recently has been let go to Minneapolis by the St. Louis Browns. Hobe always was a powerfully fine hitter and a no less prominent man on covering his position. He did not do as well when he was switched to third sack, which may be taken to mean that a second baseman once is a second baseman always.

Lanks Secure A New Manager

Lancaster, O., June 11.—Owner George Ruff secured the valuable service of Guy Sample, former manager of the East Liverpool team of the O. P. league. The deal was consummated Thursday and Guy will in all probability arrive in Lancaster Friday, and not later than Saturday. He is to take full charge of the aggregation and stated over long distance that he would give Lancaster a team that she would be proud of. Sample is well known throughout this section and will be remembered as one of Zanesville's most valuable men last season. He is an all round ball player and knows every phase of the game. His presence will be received with great rejoicing in Lankville and it is needless to say that Lancaster will continue to move forward with new life and activity.

Sample has been the manager of the East Liverpool team this season, but owing to some contention with him and the directors he resigned and was free just long enough for Owner Ruff to make the deal. And by the way, Sample had his team traveling some and was considered one of the fastest aggregations in the O. P. league. The fans should not fail to realize what such a man means to Lancaster and be ready and willing to give their support to the cause. Sample will make a winning team out of the material and as the fans are all aware there are some great players in the Lank camp if the right man gets hold of them. Inside ball will be a prominent feature with Lancaster and Sample is the man who will teach ever detail of the game.

The Rooster That Saved the Game

The following story was mailed to The Times sporting editor. It's good for the Saturday page, for its bound to make you forget the pit. pat of the raindrops and put you in good humor for the Sabbath day:

"This 'shawnty-clay' business we read of so much today," said John S. (Muggsy) McGraw, the famous baseball player and manager, "reminds me of the time that a rooster saved a close game—and he wasn't a game rooster either.

"It was back in the old and glorious Oriole days, when I managed the nationally victorious Baltimore team.

"I had heard that there was a good team at Spring Grove, an insane asylum near Baltimore, and just for a lark I took the team up there to play the nutty nine. It was going to be easy picking, but we expected a lot of fun out of it anyway.

"We were hardly prepared for what really awaited us. It chanced that there were a lot of husky rips in there, some of them former professional ball players and greedy for exercise. They had been practicing up until they were in fine form, and we had seldom been opposed by a team more nearly our equal. The boys started out in a spirit of fun, but soon saw that they would have to settle down and do all that was in them if we were to pull victory out of the thing at all. Of course we expected a batty bunch, but this one was all that and a batting bunch besides.

"The game had run on to the ninth inning. The score was three to two in our favor and the nuts were at bat. The man who was just then getting ready to swat it was a bad one for hitting. He had been able to find our pitcher every time he went to bat—found him, and found him without any apparent effort. We thought we had some chance, but not much. The pitcher uncoiled himself for a throw, the batter got ready, and—just then a rooster crowed somewhere within hearing, and the nut dropped his bat and ran for the woods like a scared dog.

"'What was the matter with him?' I asked the manager of the nutty nine.

"'Oh, nothin'; only he thinks he's a grain of corn, and he always hides when he knows there's any chickens about.'"—Strickland Gillilan.

ZUBER'S LETTER

Cincinnati, O., June 11.—A game of base ball lost at this season of the year counts just as much in the general balancing of accounts at the close of a championship race as one lost near the home stretch. Consequently, the defeats now being handed out with some degree of regularity to the World's Champion Pirates are going to prove a big handicap to Clarke's men in their ambition to repeat on their performance of 1909. The Pirates seem to have gone wrong in all departments of play. They are not hitting with their former vigor; their fielding is much to the saffron, while their pitching has been worse than that of the Reds—and that's making an exceedingly broad statement. It is expected that the Pittsburgs will strike their stride before long and start in on a real climb toward the top. But the present handicap they are carrying is going to make the pull a stiff one and there are any number of intelligent dopesters who are willing to lay a few wagers at even money that the final game of the season will see a team other than the Pirates roosting on the National league pinnacle.

Manager Griffith of the Reds, certainly has been doing a nifty house-cleaning act during the past ten days. No fewer than half a dozen men have been stricken off the team's roster, while three candidates for applause have been added. The canned athletes were Catcher Mike Konnick, Pitchers Cantwell, Castleton and Anderson, Outfielder McCabe and Infielder Charles. The additions are Infielder Robinson, late of Milwaukee; Pitcher Joe Doyle of the New York Americans, and Pitcher Bill Burns of the Chicago White Sox. Since their advent in the East the Reds have managed to bring sorrow to two teams, stopping the winning streak of both the New Yorks and the Brooklyns and incidentally breaking up a procession of defeats with which they themselves had been afflicted. The team so far has suffered one serious misfortune since leaving home in the injuring of Hans Lobert, who sprained the wrist of his right arm by falling over a base in an effort to catch a short fly. Lobert will be out of the game possibly until the team returns home for that lone Sunday game with the Chicagos on June 19.

Recent games in which the Cincinnati team has taken part have demonstrated that three of the men who had not been delivering the goods in the early part of the season finally are earning their salaries. They are Harry Gaspar, Tom Downey and Jack Rowan. The two twirlers mentioned have been showing winning form, while Downey, after nearly two months of rheumatic handicap, is thawing out under the influence of warm suns and promises to be better than ever by the time the team swings into Cincinnati again. All the Reds need now to put them right in the fight for honors is to have Beebe and Fromme display their pitching form of last season, and to have Hans Lobert's bum wrist mend. When all this comes about the Reds will be armor-plated fo every team in the league. Watch out for that condition.

TYRUS COBB WANTS A LITTLE LEEWAY

Ty Cobb says he likes a manager who allows a player to pull off a little something original once in a while. "A manager should not kill all the initiative in a player or load him down with ironbound instructions," Ty remarks. "Let him use his judgment." It's all right with Ty, but what a mixup if some players were free lances at the bat and on the bags.

They will line up as follows: Bourgholtzer, 2b; Kenedy, 1b; Manuels, ss; Cutlip, lf; Brewer, 3b; Crawford, rf; Calvert, cf; Evans, c; Steinhour or Guthrie, p.

DON'T READ THIS, PETE, TWILL SCARE YOU AWFUL

"The management has a pleasant surprise to spring on the fans within the next 24 hours and if the deal works all right Lancaster will have the strongest aggregation that makes this circuit. It is probable that the climax will be reached Saturday and if such is the case every fan in the city will be clear off their feet. The deal has been under way for several days and it is thought was closed late on Thursday evening. Baseball fans of Lancaster is going to pull away and come down the home stretch in the lead. Watch and see if they don't." And thus has Sporting Editor Dwight Walker of the Lancaster Gazette again won the pennant. Whopee! Wurra! Wurra!

WOODRUFF IS A RED LEG

Cincinnati, June 11.—Orville Woodruff is to get another show in the big league, and as a member of the Reds. President Herrmann arranged a deal Friday by which Woodie joins the team as rapidly as a train can take him, whether white Rabbit Robinson goes to the Louisville team in exchange. The Reds also agree to turn over another player, inside of two weeks, thus making it a two-for-one deal, advantageous to both clubs. Woodruff was in the big league long ago, but did not stick. He was only a kid at the time he was with the Reds, and was let out largely because he couldn't bat. Of late years, he has developed splendidly, and is now a fast, clever all-round player, good either infield or out, and a tricky, reliable switsmith. The deal is one that will be welcomed by the fans, with whom Orville has always been hugely popular.

Will Doc Go Higher

A note in the Virginia Valley league correspondence to the Sporting News this week says: "The umpires in this circuit are attracting attention by their good work and at least two of them are expected to go higher next season."

Wonder if reference is made to our fellow citizen and townsman Doc Severs?

John Ledbetter is painting a large sign at Sciotoville for the A. J. Brumberg company, of Ironton.

Two Bouquets For Our Briddy

In speaking of the victory won by the Giants over the Cardinals in New York, Thursday, Sam Crane, the versatile base ball editor of the New York World says concerning the work of Al Bridwell:

"Bridwell's all around work was just what is expected of him. If there is any shortstop in the country who can make those stops and throws of slow puzzlers with more grace, science and accuracy than your own Brid, I would like to get a peep at him. No player lives who can compare with him on those particular plays. Bridwell, too, was the chief hitsmith yesterday.

"He copped off three, one a triple. Doyle, Devare, Devlin and Meyers were all there with the hitstick, too. In fact, all the Giants are entitled to much praise for good work.

"The Giants play the Cardinals again this afternoon, and the game will wind up the present series between them. There is, of course such a possibility as the Giants topping the Cubs this evening. That, of course, adds interest to the afternoon's proceedings."

The New York Telegram handed Briddy the following boost:

"Didn't hear any village blacksmiths ringing any anvils about Bridwell. Guess not. Only three base hits and some fielding that would have driven a teacher in delsarte to the village pump."

★ Pitches Eleven-Inning Game Without a Hit

★ Worcester, Mass., June 11 —A new eastern record for a "no hit, no run" game in baseball was made here on Wednesday, it is claimed, when Harry Wormwood of the Fall River team of the New England league pitched for eleven innings without allowing a hit or a run, in the game with Worcester. Fall River won 1 to 0. The best previous record for a "no hit, no run" game was made by Wiltse of the New York Nationals in a ten-inning game.

Lallier Signs Lank Contract

Lancaster, O., June 11.—Shortstop Lallier recently of the Dallas, Texas league, has signed a contract with the Lanks and will work in the short field this afternoon. Lallier played third base for the Lanks last season and is well known throughout the circuit. His batting average is great and he will strengthen the team considerable.

Knights Are To Entertain

The Knights of Columbus will entertain with a box social, cards and dance at their hall, corner Sixth and Chillicothe streets, Wednesday evening, June 15th.

Jeffries Sketched At Camp

O'Day of Portsmouth Is Leading Batter

Portsmouth's star center fielder, Mr. O'Day, the cultured chap from the East, has the honor of leading the regular players in the Ohio State league at the bat, according to the present batch of averages. He is bingling .316, having taken part in 31 games and waltzed to the plate 117 times. Not only is he leading the regulars in the average but is the slugger of the league, as 14 of his 37 hits have been for extra bases. He has his first home run to make, but has 7 two-baggers and an equal number of three cushion shots to his credit. Great is Mr. O'Day.

Mr. O'Day is leading the league, also, when it comes to committing thefts. He has pilfered 18 sacks, his closest rival being Emmett Reilly, the beefy catcher of the Diggers, who has swiped 13 cushions. O'Day has demonstrated that he is one of the speed boys of the league and is not one of those kind of players who require the assistance of a sacrifice to advance him a base.

His side partner, Left Fielder Breen is right behind him. The boy from Maine is hitting .307 and has the distinction of leading the league in the number of runs scored, having negotiated the round trip an even 20 times. Mr. Breen has smashed out five doubles and a lengthy triple, and the fact that he has stolen but five bases can be laid to the door of his injured ankle. Just wait until that underpin of his gets back its full strength and then watch him burn up the base paths. Manager Childs is still above the .300 mark, bingling one point better than that figure. Pete has scored 17 runs—guess the astute Quaker has done his share in the offensive department of the game. Callis has dropped out of the 300 society. But remember that Big Frank Moore, one of Portsmouth's star twirlers, is there with the willow, hiting at a .355 clip. "Peggy" says he is going to stay up in select society until the bell taps.

The average of all the home players, together with a hint as to what some of the Molders are doing with the willow, will be seen below, together with the leading batsmen of the other teams in the league, Reilly of Lima, .337; Harrison, Chillicothe, .324; Meehan, Marion, 296; Ruff, Lancaster, .263:

Pitcher Who Killed Pinkney Will Not Play In the Central

Behind the fight being made by the Grand Rapids ball club of the Central league for the services of Pitcher "Casey" Hagerman who it is said, Manager Jack Hendricks of Denver has attempted to "steal," is a story probably the most melancholy of any ever staged on a base ball diamond. Peculiar interest is given the tale because the central figure in the tragedy—for tragedy it is—was "Cupid" Pinkney, former Collinwood player.

After an unusually successful season at Newark, O., where he played the major part of the summer, Pinkney joined the Dayton team of the Central league last fall. Despite the fact that he was attacked by pangs of homesickness—Pinkney was only twenty—his playing was brilliant and all the Dayton fans swore by the little fellow.

A few days before the season ended Pinkney's father went to Dayton to visit his son and to remain with him until he would accompany him to Collinwood. On the September afternoon that Mr. Pinkney arrived at Fairview park Dayton, the Vets were playing Grand Rapids. "Casey" Hagerman, one of the most formidable twirlers of the Central league, was in the box for the Stags.

"Cupid" who topped the batting list, hit for a home run the first time up and was a star both at bat and in the field the remainder of the day. The game was played slowly and when Pinkney came to bat in the ninth it was almost dark. The umpire was guilty of serious error—almost a crime—in neglecting to suspend the contest.

Two fast balls were thrown by Hagerman. Then a wild inshoot curved its way to the batter's box. The speed was almost magical and the darkness was so great that it was impossible to dodge the ball and "Cupid" Pinkney fell senseless. He never regained consciousness and died less than twenty-four hours later.

Players wept as they watched the heart broken parent at the boy's bedside.

The Grand Rapids players and Pinkney's team mates were badly broken up and the season ended at once. But Hagerman's grief was inconsolable, pitiable. He wanted to do away with himself.

During the winter Jack Hendricks, Ft. Wayne manager, secured a berth as manager at Denver and he at once signed many Central leaguers. It is said he made overtures to Hagerman, notwithstanding he is under contract with Grand Rapids.

The majority of persons censure Hendricks for his action in regard to "stealing" Hagerman. They do not know that Hagerman has said he never again will play in a Central league uniform, for he cannot bear to visit Fairview park at Dayton, where he unintentionally killed "Cupid" Pinkney—a boy who gave up his life as he was reaching the crest of his career.

Famous Revivalists And Their Methods Vividly Described

"Dancing is nothing but a hugging match set to music. Talk about the poetry of motion! It's just a devilish snare of souls.

"The slum dance is better than the club dance, because they wear more clothes at it.

"Saw bridge whist and you reap gamblers. The man who sits at a table and bets $1000 on a jackpot is no more a gambler than the society belle who plays bridge for a prize."

It would not take more than one guess to decide Billy Sunday was the speaker. An immensely interesting picture of the baseball evangelist is drawn of him in Dr. Thomas E. Green's article, "Revivals and Revivalists" in Hampton's Magazine for June. All the big revivalists are shown "in action." Their effect on huge audiences is noted, the permanency of their conversions discussed, and a description of their unique methods provided. Billy Sunday, for instance, "plays the game" just as he did with the old Chicago ball club. Says Dr. Green:

Plays Ball on Platform

"On the platform he plays ball. Attitude, gestures, method—he crouches, rushes, whirls, bangs his message out, as if he were at the bat in the last inning, with two men out and the bases full. And he can go into any city in America and for six weeks talk to 6000 people twice a day, and simply turn that community inside out. He says San Francisco is the wickedest city we have; New Orleans next, Chicago third, and New York fourth. Over 300,000 people have been converted under his preaching, and he says 90 per cent of them stick."

Dr. Green then tells of the sensational methods employed by Gypsy Smith, and of his famous midnight march through the red light district of Chicago

"Under the patronage of 45 churches, he had invaded Chicago for a month's meetings. Romany born and bred, Gypsy Smith is the most emotional type of the revivalist. When he decided to lead his followers on a midnight march through the tenderloin, to be followed by a meeting in the Alhambra theater, everybody advised against it. The revivalist insisted, the spectacle was announced, the newspapers gave it endless advertising.

All Chicago There.

All Chicago flocked early to see the show. Five thousand marchers, four abreast, many of them boys and young women, devout old men and grandmothers, inspired by an earnest notion that they were doing something heroic, marched through the section where the worst dregs of Chicago's vice was segregated. The streets were jammed with multitudes of the curious from theater parties in evening clothes and automobiles, to boys and girls for whom it was an astounding lark.

"All the other resorts were closed by order of the police, but the morbid throngs filled the saloons. Barkeepers were exhausted with the effort to serve their patrons. Cafes were thronged with men and women drinking at the tables. Young men and girls everywhere showed the effect of undue indulgence during the long wait for the show.

"The instant the marchers had passed beyond the ditriet, the resorts threw open their doors and police and divekeepers gave unanimous testimony that there never had been a night of such business as was transacted from that hour until daylight."

Next to Billy Sunday in popular demand and in evangelistic efficiency Dr. Green places George R. Stuart of Tennessee, for 16 years the associate of the late Sam Jones.

Sunday and Stuart Alike.

"In many respects Sunday and Stuart are alike," he says. "They both believe in and preach the same strenuous, orthodox, insistent theology. Heaven or hell is the future destination of every soul—and it's a real heaven and a sure enough hell. Of the two, Stuart is by far the gentler. Sunday is startling, bold, bellicose, grim; Stuart is tender, emotional, pleading, persuasive."

The greatest sum Stuart and Sam Jones ever received was $5000, to be divided between the two men, after Excell, their singer, and all other assistants had been paid. This was for a three weeks' meeting. For 10 days their compensation varied from $1000 to $3000.

"On the lecture platform, Sam Jones got $200 for a single lecture, George Stuart $125; Excell could have made his music pay him $300 a week. Billy Sunday's income is reputed to be $20,000 a year."

SIDELIGHTS ALONG WASHINGTON BYWAYS.

Washington, D. C., Saturday June 11.—"Well, this certainly looks like old times," remarked Representative James E. Mann, of Illinois, as he observed Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, of Boston, in a corridor of the capitol, surrounded by newspaper correspondents.

"Right," chimed in Representative Roberts, of Massachusetts, as he joined the group and shook hands. "Still, talking, Fitz!"

When Mayor Fitzgerald was a member of the House in 1897 he was the youngest member of that body. Incidentally he was the most energetic and he had the reputation of being able to get more newspaper space than any other member of Congress.

"Fitzgerald's visit," said a member of the House, "reminds me of the days when he was a member here. He was the most remarkably busy man I ever seen in Congress. He always had something on tap that made good newspaper copy, and when the correspondents were in a bad way for news they always could count upon Fitzgerald to give them something worth while.

"The present Mayor of Boston was the greatest hustler I have ever seen. I remember a story he told me once about the way he kept his constituents guessing as to his whereabouts. He would deliver a corking good speech in the afternoon, hustle down to the station and catch the through train for Boston, and the next morning he would be back home getting first hand information as to how his remarks were received in his district. Jumping back and forth between Washington and Boston was quite as ordinary a journey for him as between Baltimore and Washington every day."

Mayor Fitzgerald while here disclosed a plan for a combination between the democrats and republicans of Massachusetts with the avowed purpose of trying to bring about the defeat of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge next January by swinging democratic votes to some independent republican.

There is one member of Congress who is certain to be subjected to all of the troubles which a waiter can inflict on a person who eats in a fashionable restaurant. He is Representative Arthur Phillips Murphy, of the Sixteenth Missouri district. Every waiter in Washington has the Indian sign on Mr. Murphy, and they have sworn to make his life miserable every time he dines away from home. The reason is because Mr. Murphy has some decided views about the propriety of the great American public being called upon to pay toll to the waiters after it has paid a fancy price to the hotel proprietor.

Mr. Murphy's convictions on this subject are so deep seated that he has been trying for years to get a bill through Congress making the practice of tipping unlawful. Members of the committees to which these bills have been referred usually have a lot of fun with them, but they never get within a thousand miles of being enacted into law.

Mr. Murphy's antagonism to the tipping system is said to be due to his knowledge of the value of each and every penny which comes into his possession. He has reached his present position only because of a bulldog determination. He began life on a farm and worked as a farm hand from sun-up until sundown. When he had developed sufficiently to engage in harder work he found employment as a section hand. After working out on the road all day Murphy studied telegraphy at night, and finally got a job as telegraph operator and filled that place so well that he was made train despatcher.

When he was not engaged in plotting the routing of trains in Missouri he was studying law, and was admitted to practice in 1894. Murphy still finds use for the fighting qualities which made it possible for him to desert the railroad for Congress, for his district is so close that he considers himself lucky if he gets a majority of two or three hundred.

Runs Nail Into Foot

Alfred Sprecher, one of the Times' hustling little news merchants had the misfortune to puncture his foot on a rusty nail Saturday morning which he stepped on at the stable in the rear of his parent's home on East Eleventh street where he had gone to feed his dog.

The injury was a most painful one as the nail went almost through the lad's foot and will lay the newsie up for quite awhile. In the meantime his route will be taken care of by his capable helper.

MERWIN

By Elizabeth Newport Hepburn.

MERWIN had been writing so hard all summer that this absolute rest and the sea wind against his face and the feel of the warm sand under his bare feet was utterly satisfying. He was glad now that he had not accepted the Parmley's invitation to Oyster Bay: house parties had their charm, but he was in no mood for the complications of the social game. The presence of one or two peaceful, congenial people might have been an addition to his present content, but he wanted nothing so much as rest, and rest was not to be obtained, in Merwin's estimation, where one must cavort about at the behest of half a dozen strenuous girls and an even more exacting hostess. But here on the ocean side of the island, his modest hostelry within a stone's throw of the surf, he could loaf in his bathing suit for hours in the sun and rid himself gradually of the wretched sense of nervous strain which had possessed him for months.

Since it was September the beach was not crowded, just spots of color here and there made by the floating fair hair of some children digging in the sand and by the red bathing cap of a tall girl somewhere about the middle distance.

Lying on his side, his elbow propping his head, his big shoulders and muscular limbs passive, his eyes wide and dreamy and very dark, Merwin made a considerable addition to the composition of the picture, as the girl in the bathing-dress and red cap realized. She was standing on the edge of things dry and stable, facing three thousand miles of salt sea. Merwin, watching her, decided that she was one of the few women he had seen who in bathing costume looked thoroughbred. The longer he looked the more he liked her slenderness, which was yet rounded and graceful, the poise of her small head, the grace of her every attitude and movement. As he watched her she advanced slowly into the surf, making little jerky ejeculations as she moved. Evidently the water was a bit wintry, in spite of the warm sun.

Suddenly she flung in all her slender length. Merwin shivered sympathetically as she drew to her full height dripping wet, rings of bright hair escaping from her cap. Then she whirled about, danced into deeper water, waving her white arms, obviously reveling in the wine glow of the sea, which energizes every nerve and muscle. He had never seen anything prettier than the game she was playing with the surf. Suddenly he lost her, and in the thrill of something like terror he sprang to his feet, only to see her a dozen yards farther out floating serenely beyond the breakers.

There were no life-guards nor ropes nearer than the hotel, a full quarter of a mile away and the beach was now practically deserted. Merwin took the plunge lustily, swimming out towards the lightly floating figure. As he drew near she turned on her face and began to swim, with long easy strokes. He kept parallel with her, and they went up the beach toward the hotel. Merwin was watching, not entirely impersonally, the red cap which suddenly seemed to symbolize the charm of the unknown; the lure of the woman whom a man cannot place, who stands to him for mystery and a certain wild freedom from the conventions of life.

Suddenly, as his novelist brain wove airy fancies about her, she again disappeared. In another moment he was barely two feet from a lovely face flung back upon high folded arms. She floated high, her cap gone, leaving exposed a quantity of wet, curling hair, which now looked dark red rather than golden.

"Did you dive to frighten me?" spluttered Merwin. "If so, you succeeded!"

She laughed. "I never thought of you," she returned easily. "Why should I?"

This was so unanswerable, although he didn't believe her, that Merwin merely swam along silently, when he saw suddenly that they were heading for the open sea.

"Turn over and swim!" he commanded. "We are getting too far out." And he set the example of heading toward the shore. For a moment she did not obey, and he had a sensation of altogether unreasoning rage, when her laugh rippled after him and she followed with a "Please wait!" which was a little breathless.

As they emerged from the cradle-like swinging of the deep into rough surf and touched bottom, they looked at each other for a moment, then a great breaker hurled down upon them.

The girl was flung roughly against Merwin; he caught her and held her steady against the fierce pounding of the waves.

The beach beyond them was quite empty; the sun low and red against a bank of clouds on the horizon. Merwin felt her tremble as he stood with his arm supporting her, the clear pallor of her wet face turned to deep warm pink. She was certainly beautiful, and they appeared to be quite alone in the universe. Also, she had frightened him and made him angry.

"I should like you to know that I want to kiss you, and that morally I consider I should be quite justified in doing so!" He strode into the shallows and loosened his hold. "But I won't," he concluded royally.

The brown eyes that looked at him laughed no longer. "Thank you so much—for behaving like a gentleman!" she said bitingly. As she stood for a moment a step above him, her smile came suddenly; in the glow from the sky she looked nymph-like, with her loose, warm-hued hair and the exquisite lightness of her figure outlined in her dripping dress.

She laughed a soft laugh of raillery. "Thank you—and good-by—Mr. Merwin." Her tone was the tone of casual acquaintance, for the benefit he guessed of the solitary attendant in the bath-house, but as he turned and ran swiftly towards his own cottage, he was curiously puzzled. He muttered half aloud, "Mr. Merwin? Then all along she knew me!" And the maddening thing about it was that he had never to his knowledge beheld her before, and he might never see her again.

But the next day he found her at the same place, at the same hour. It was getting so late that there were fewer people along the beach, and fewer still who appeared to regard bathing in the cold surf as desirable pastime.

But Merwin and the girl were compensating themselves for a long, hot summer in town. Daily they took the delicious plunge, and though he saw her nowhere else, each meeting added amazingly to his sense of their intimate kinship.

One afternoon they sat together on the beach. Hitherto they had avoided personalities and talked of books. Merwin found that for all her outdoor air she had read a great deal and that her taste was catholic and critical. Yet he didn't recover from his first impression that her charm was curiously unhackneyed, as though she belonged not to the endless routine of cities but to the untrammeled open, away from the rut of the usual. He said something of this sort to her, in his tentative effort to place her among the types, and she smiled at him with lazy amusement.

He added thoughtfully, "I suppose it's part of my interest in what I don't understand that I haven't even tried to discover your name!"

"What difference do labels make?" she said. "We both love this stretch of lonesome beach; we both are tired of every-day security of common living; the sea is here, big and treacherous and changeable, —why can't we be unknown quantities to each other and enjoy the novel sensation? It will belong to the past soon!"

"That's what I fear!" Merwin sat up suddenly and stared at her. "Each afternoon when I come here I am afraid you won't appear; you don't seem quite real to me, rather as though I had found some mermaid in the green waters, who any moment might dive under the sea to join her own people!" He laid his hand on her wet skirt. "Please, strange Sea Lady, tell me that you won't go back to them.

I might try to follow you, and you know I am only a mortal, and I might get drowned!"

She brushed a strand of hair out of her eyes. "The remedy is so obvious!" Then she laughed again with that teasing note in her soft voice. "But despite the unconventionality of at least one of his novels, Mr. Merwin is a stickler for form, family, the social amenities! So long as you don't know me, hadn't you better steer clear of personalities? You know I may be a book agent, or a stenographer. Think of the unpleasantness of discovering a one-time mermaid at your office desk some morning trying to sell you a fifth-rate encyclopedia!"

Merwin sighed. "I don't work in an office. And I wish I were as sure of all things I want in life as I am that your corruption and existence are the antithesis of such hopeless prose!"

She sprang suddenly to her feet. "I'm going in again, just for a moment. It's glorious out there—and perhaps my mermaid sisters are waiting for me to bring them some new-fangled toilet accessories for the combing of their sea-green tresses!"

She ran down the beach, Merwin after her. "Be careful!" he shouted. "The undertow to-day is strong and tricky."

But she was beyond the breakers which buffet and sting, her slender shape rising and falling on the green billows, her hair which she had forgotten to imprison in her cap, tossing like strange seaweed in the trough of the sea. Merwin swam strongly beside her. He had a curious unprecedented sensation, that this woman with the strong limbs, the bounding pulses, the tossing hair, was the one woman in the universe,—a being to desire and to adore. He swam nearer. "Mermaid I don't know your name; I'm afraid you are not real, but I believe I love you!"

He heard her laugh again. "And this is Mr. Merwin—the widely-read author, whose name occasionally adorns the pages of the 'Society Journal' as 'among those of distinction present'!" She laughed again, and then gurgled distressfully, her mouth full of salt water.

"You're not a mermaid yet!" scoffed Merwin. But his lips touched a strand of floating hair, he felt that he had gone a little mad, yet reveled in the sensation.

He could see the mockery in her wide eyes. "How do you know I'm 'possible'—fit to mate with the ancient Merwins of Staten Island. I may be socially an anachronism,—and though your pen runs free of social prejudices your soul doesn't!"

Even here, in this region of wide sea and sky, Merwin felt a thrill of fear, almost repulsion. By taste and inheritance he was an aristocrat, with carefully defined standards in manners; living to him was a matter of exquisite adjustments, a subtle weeding out of things and people that seemed not worth while. She might be a mermaid, but he laughed at the security of his feeling that she was a mermaid of standing!

Yet, even as he strove to tell her his thought shorn of its snobbishness, he had a frightful physical twinge. The ocean was chilly. For the first time in his life he knew the deadly fear which may overtake the strongest swimmer.

He broke his sentence with an inarticulate cry, then—"My God, I can't swim!" In his horror of dragging her down, he turned away from her, trying at the same time to turn on his back and float in order to rest.

But she was beside him. "Put your hand on my shoulder; mind, or I'll go under with you. Now——"

Merwin had obeyed, but the pain gripped him, he held on mechanically, his dead weight sagging against her strong, even strokes. But she swam bravely, though progress seemed so slow. After a little the effect began to tell upon her, her pulses throbbed, her heart pounded,—the waves seemed to be growing higher, more fantastic in color and shape, the ocean took on a threatening and alien aspect,—but as in some terrible dream she struggled with all these monster shapes of evil and she swam on and on and on.

When Merwin came to himself he was lying on the sand; people were rubbing him, with an energy that hurt. He gasped, remembered. "Where is she?" he muttered.

The big life-guardsmen laughed. "She? Why, man, she's half-way home by now. She changed her things at the bath-house after the doctor here said you'd come round."

The physician, a spectacled youngster who was putting up at Merwin's cottage, grinned down at him reassuringly. "I rather think the young lady left that you might not have the bother of thanking her. It's awkward, this gratitude business."

Though he waited all the next afternoon, she did not come. And he could not discover her name, or even where an unknown young lady with red hair had been staying. After three days of angry and fruitless seeking, Merwin went back to town. Settling down again to steady work was not easy.

He got back to the business of writing his novel with a stolid, dogged perseverence that was the utmost remove from enthusiasm. Each night, as he read his day's work, it seemed to him wholly uninteresting! Yet his tentative excursions to the houses of his friends lent him no inspiration. He found them now amazingly commonplace, well bred, well groomed, with a cordial liking for himself and his work—but somehow shorn in his eyes of the human interest which counts for the joy of companionship.

He wanted just one thing,—to discover the hiding place of his Lady of the Sea. Yet he told himself a great many times that he was a fool; that though she had saved his life she cared nothing for him.

And then one morning, still thinking about her, and wondering what manner of woman she might be in her native atmosphere, and imagining the simplicity, the dignity, the perfection of her environment, he came upon her face to face, behind the counter of a huge white marble department store! She was shaking out a pair of long white gloves preparatory to trying them on the hand of a woman seated before the counter and as she met his amazed eyes the burning color ran over her face like a flame, and her eyes fell. Then she looked at him again, her head high. In response to his grave bow she gave a curt nod, and in another moment she was lost to him in the quiet and deft performance of her duties.

He went home in a fever of rage—rage at himself, rage at this woman with her air of distinction, and for her extraordinary trade, and a sick amazement that the thing could be possible. And yet the poet in him scoffed at the notion that she was anything less alluring, less satisfying, than his nymph against a background of blue sky and green water. He thought of his friends, of his stately, old fashioned mother, he remembered pretty, fastidious Jessie Van Ness in her dignified old New York environment, and though he had never loved her, Jessie Van Ness meant a great deal to him, not merely in herself, but because of what she represented in the conservative set which to Merwin was the best that a modern city can show.

Yet it was not Merwin's mother nor Merwin's friends who counted most in this struggle with his own soul. It was his own scorn he feared. He had always recognized that there were two warring forces in his nature, the imagination which revels in the beautiful and the unhackneyed wherever placed, and that respect for the very mundane conclusions of his own kind, his own class, even of himself, as he knew himself best in the moments when stories were not weaving themselves in his brain.

Two weeks later, at six o'clock of an October day, Fifth Avenue was black with hurrying groups of young women swept suddenly from the doors of a great building into the streams of pedestrians which throng one of the proudest streets in the world. At the corner, a little beyond the surging of these eager young women, a tall man waited and watched.

At last came a girl dressed severely in dark green. Under her simple hat a gleam of bright hair showed; her face was pale, with tired lines about the mouth, and shadows beneath the beautiful eyes. The man came forward eagerly, and the girl faced him half angrily, no longer pale.

"Mr. Merwin!"

They were walking side by side. Merwin's voice was very quiet and curiously happy. "I came to walk home with you, Sea Nymph, and incidentally to thank you for saving my life!"

They had passed into a side street, and the girl stopped suddenly. Merwin saw that she looked older than he remembered her, and he wondered how any creature so strong as he knew her to be could seem so delicately molded as she looked in her long, close-fitting coat.

"Do you realize, Mr. Merwin, that in town I can only know you in the usual conventional way? You know my social standing—and I happen to know something about yours! But I have my code, and we meet as equals—or as strangers!"

Merwin's low laugh was a pleasant sound. "Dear mermaid, I only want to marry you—so that we can meet very often! And afterwards we will talk about social equality. There is an old, little, famous church within five minutes walk of us—if you'll answer a few questions there first, we'll go home to dinner."

Merwin's lady was walking again, very swiftly, her cheeks a deep pink, her brown eyes full of laughter.

"We will not!" was what she said. "Do you think I am going to be cheated out of my due share of courtship and congratulations and engagement presents?"

Her voice sounded happy, too, and Merwin stole a long glance at her profile. He saw tears on her eyelashes—and he hated himself for his indecision.

What strange thing was this accursed pride of place which made a man slow to recognize the one flower he wanted to gather out of all the world!

"Then you will kindly tell me what we are going to do?—where we are going?" he said, as she led the way.

"To call on a friend of mine, who will introduce us properly," she answered demurely. "Do you mind a long walk?"

Merwin remembered that walk all his life—the tang of the crisp air, his companion's long, light step, her gay voice.

As they neared Washington Square at last, she turned to him with a little shrug. "And all these eons you don't even know my name. How absurd you are—more mad than any of your heroes!"

"You could have told me any day these six weeks," he retorted. "I am quite indifferent now."

She ran up a flight of steps facing the square. He followed her blindly, and in a moment they entered a big, dark hall. Suddenly a girl in white swept down the stairway.

"Why, Dallas Merwin—and, in the name of all that's wonderful, Helen Archer—together! And I had just been planning to introduce you to each other!"

Merwin's lady laughed gaily. "You are introducing us now—which is what we came here for!"

Merwin stared. He was looking into the laughing eyes of Jessie Van Ness, and she had her arm around his Lady of the Sea. Jessie was speaking eagerly.

"Helen, I have such news for you! Dad has been promised your appointment at last—you're to have a clerkship in the Library at Washington! He says the Civil Service will be child's play to you—but, oh, my dear, it will be so vile to have you go!"

Helen looked at Merwin with mischief in her gay smile. "Mr Merwin, do you think they can spare me from the marble palace on the avenue?"

But Jessie scented something hidden from her keen eyes. She turned upon Merwin, half angrily. Had he misunderstood this brave friend of hers? "Do you know why she has been doing this bizarre thing, Dallas?" she asked him. "Do you know that down in Virginia the death of her father left only enough income to support her mother and her little lame brother, so she came here by herself and accepted the first wretched job?"

Merwin looked her in the eyes, and his face burned. "I think I do, Jess!"

And then, to Jessie's astonishment, Helen leaned across and laid her hand on Merwin's clenched fingers. Her touch was light as the spray of the sea and her smile was very sweet.

"Jessica, dear, he asked me to marry him an hour ago—in the blaze of the avenue, with all the world walking past!" She patted Merwin's hand with a little laugh that was very near tears.

"Dear, all our lives we shall be so glad that you asked me—then!"

FOR EVERY BOY AND GIRL

HOW THE TWINS CELEBRATED

By LILIAN C. PASCHAL.

THEY were twins, and their real names were Marian and Stanley Howard. But nick-names are such sticky things—like cockle-burrs. I think they must be called nicked names, because they are only real ones hacked up and then stuck onto you so you can never get rid of them. You never would have recognized the word "brother" unless you saw sister's tiny pointing finger and watched her little rosy lips all pursed up into a tight rosebud with the struggle to get the word out; then when it finally came, it was made over into "Bobba"—and Bobba the boy-twin remains to this day.

Not to be outdone in glory by a mere girl and desiring, as usual to divert some of this stream of praise to his own small person, "Bobba," the newly Christened, pointed in turn a fat forefinger and exploded his first word, "Bobba free!" And such she remains to this day.

All of which passed quite properly into family history and nomenclature. Also was it typical of their dual achievements thereafter—she was always first on the spot, being much the quicker in wits, but he invariably followed up the rear humoringly. She was so lively and "get-there-ative" that it spurred him to his best—or worst—endeavors just to keep up with her, while to get ahead required master-strokes of brilliancy that amounted to genius—which he never knew he possessed till put to the test by her initiative. So it was quite apparent, even to the most casual observer, that being a twin made life very exciting to each of them—sometimes also to their doting parents and guardians at all times.

Competition was their watchword. Hence arose the complications centering about a certain Fourth-of-July celebration early in the history of the Howard twins—and which very nearly resulted in a dearth of subsequent twin-history, because of a conspicuous threatened lack of twin-material wherewith to make angels of any sort. They were clothed in brand-new habiliments, "in honor of the Nation's birthday," as mamma had gravely explained, desiring to inculcate patriotism into her offspring at an early age—Bobba in white "Buster Browns" about the size of a clothes-pin, and Bobbaty in spotless white pinafore of butterfly dimensions and filminess. During this painful process of dressing, they fired off a whole broadside of questions, like so many popping fire-crackers.

"What's Force-a-July?" was the first one in unison, each twin having vague ideas of breakfast food in connection with the name. "Is it good to eat?"

"No, it's the Nation's birthday," reiterated mamma.

"How old's Nathan?" from Bobba.

Mamma smiled faintly. "About a hundred and twenty years old," she replied.

"W'y Rosy bake a birfday cvake for Nathan?" asked Bobbaty. "Wiv a hundred an' twenty candles on it?" followed up Bobba quickly, capping his little sister as usual.

Mamma laughed aloud. Twins were certainly a care she reflected, but wonderfully entertaining as an occupation. Seeing these evidences of parental leniency, the wins opened up the real siege.

"Can't we have some fire-crackers, too, p'ease, mamma—like Johnny Smif in de nex' yard?" begged Bobbaty.

"His farver divved him a whole dollar to buy 'em wiv—we did saw him do so fru de back fence," averred Bobba.

"No, dears." Mamma's tone was discouragingly firm. "You know papa expressly forbade any fire-works at all to-day—wait till next year—you're too little yet."

"We're free years old apiece," cried Bobbaty eagerly, twisting her hair-ribbons out of the maternal fingers busied at that moment with tying her rebellious curls, as she squirmed around to face the attack, "an' free an' free is six—you told me so," this very accusingly.

"Johnny Smif is only five, an' we's six," Bobba clinched the argument for the prosecution of their plans.

But mamma remained hard-hearted. "Papa said no," she replied firmly—which ended the matter. "But when he comes home to-night he will set off some fireworks on the lawn after dark—won't that be nice?"

But the twins stared in tearful gloom out of the open window. To-night was a very long time off, hours and hours—and the enticingly fizzy noises which sounded up from the street outside, were very present, indeed.

"Now put on your hats and take your pails and shovels out to the sand-pile, and play like good children. I expect company to-day and shall be very busy. Nurse has a holiday, so you must help me by being nice and obedient."

The pair of tots marched downstairs and out into the inclosed backyard, their usual playground, in gloomy silence. But the pretty pails and the building of sand-castles which only yesterday had been such sources of joy, palled into boredom in the strong light of this new and unreachable desire, like lamplight in the dawn of a new day.

The twins sat themselves down on the hot sand and lamented. All around them in other yards little boys and girls were reveling in lovely, snappy crackers, and their merry shouts only added to the twins' misery.

Out in all the lawns along the street fluttering flags proclaimed the day to be a gala occasion. It did seem hard to be so very miserable when every known law required one—or more properly speaking two—to rejoice and be glad. So Bobba and Bobbaty mourned and refused to be comforted, till Bobbaty had one of her bright ideas; she believed in enduring only what was past curing.

"Let's det de dwums, an' goan' 'em wiv de pails an' dat'll make noise," she proposed suddenly, jumping up to suit the action to the word, and running back into the house.

While she was gone, Bobba sat still and ruminated. His slow little brain was at work very laboriously. At last it evolved its brilliant climax—a "Force-a-July" that would surpass Bobbaty's drum celebration, and be even better than she longed-for, forbidden fire-crackers. For had he not with his very own ears heard Rosy, the cook, tell a wonderful creepy story about the gasolene to the meat-boy only the day before?

"I was just ready to fill the tank," she had related with the gusto of one who has had a narrow escape, "an' set the can down to uncork it, when bst! went the match I'd stepped on an' flew right up onto the can, lighted an' all as it was! It came in an inch o' the uncovered hole. Land! It makes me tremble now to think o' the explosion that would have happened if that match had gone into that hole!"

"You'd had Fourth-o'-July fireworks sure!" the meat-boy exclaimed as he wrote down the order and went away.

Fourth of July fireworks were exactly what he and Bobbaty wanted just then more than anything else in the world. Papa had never forbidden them to touch the gasolene can—for the very good reason that he had never dreamed it to be necessary. He should have known better, of course, but but this was his first pair of twins, you see, so he was inexperienced.

It would be hard to get at, for Rosy had an inconvenient way of putting things out of reach, but if they pushed the old stool in the corner of the store-room close up to the shelf, together they might be able to get it down.

But the match? Rosy had seemed to think that necessary to make gasolene into fireworks—Rosy was a scary thing, he thought, to be frightened of big noises—she even put her fingers into her ears every time the cannon bounced.

But matches, he knew were strictly outside the pale of permissable commodities—fathers could be very disagreeable if they were disobeyed—besides he couldn't possibly get to the match-box on the kitchen wall, anyway. What was it the boys next door lighted their fire-crackers with?

At this point in his meditations, Bobbaty returned with the drums slung over her shoulders and a smile of triumph on her cherubic countenance which decided him to carry out his plan at all hazards. One's Force-a-July couldn't be run altogether by a girl—one must be the leader at all costs. So to her proffer of his drum he returned only a scornful glance that promptly had the desired effect of squelching her pride. She dropped her drum and a tin pail in the sand and followed him into the storeroom, a detached small building in the rear of the house. Rosy was busy with her baking, grandma had fled to the country for the day to be rid of the racket, she said—a queer reason, the twins thought—and mamma's callers had come, so no one interfered with their proceedings as they tugged and hauled at the big can full of danger that sat on the storeroom shelf. By dint of much exertion they got it down, and worked and twisted at the cork till they got it out. It was only half-filled—a fact which made the danger greater.

"Make big noises," said Bobba eagerly, his eyes ashine with excitement, "Desser'n dwums—or fire-trackers!"

"But where'll we det a match?" questioned the practical Bobbaty. "Papa'll whip!"

"Me fix 'em," was the non-committal reply, delivered in an offensively superior manner, as Bobba ran into the yard.

In a few moments he returned, carrying aloft in great glee a long stick of punk with one end smouldering redly.

"Where'd you det it?" asked his little sister.

"Ifo! 'At's easy! was the lordly reply, "I buyed it o' Johnny Smif fru de back yard fence. He was lightin' his trackers wiv it."

"What'd you buyed it wiv?" she inquired.

"Wiv our dwums!" he announced with a sweep of his hand as who would say—"The price is no object to me!"

"Bobba Tualey Howard!" The little girl rose wrathfully above him as he squatted by the gasolene can. "You ain't never divved away my dwum 'at Santa Claus brang me?" He nodded guiltily.

"You nassy, awful boy!" The enormity of his iniquity was too great for words—she began to cry and started for the door. "I'm goin' tell mamma on you —oo—hoo!"

A bothersome lump came into Bobba's throat and a frown of annoyance to his brow. Girls were very troublesome, he thought, why couldn't God have sent him a boy-twin, anyway? He intimated as much to her as he called her back. This was one way to meet emergencies, as he had long ago found out—she had long secretly cherished a like wonderment, though not for worlds would she own to him that being a girl wasn't ever so much nicer. But she paused in the doorway to argue the old question.

"Dirls is besser'n boys anyhow," she affirmed, wiping her eyes carefully, on the butterfly pinafore.

"Boys don't try over nossin'," he answered quite firmly and scornfully. And he turned toward the can of contention with the lighted punk.

"Children! What were you quarrelling about? Didn't I hear Bobbaty crying?" came a voice outside.

The apparition of his mother in the doorway startled the little boy so that he dropped the punk into the open hole over which he had it suspended. Mrs. Howard's horrified glance took in the dreadful situation in one awful second. With one long bound she reached him as a sheet of flame burst from the can—seized him and ran out to the walk where the little girl was screaming in terror.

"Fire! Fire!" Mamma screamed too, at the top of her voice, rushing with both babies in her arms to the street. The alarm brought the fire-engine and a great mob of people, almost quicker than it takes to tell it. The yard was filled with smoke, hose, firemen, and excitement, while the storeroom was belching forth black puffs streaked with terrifying red. Small boys kept swarming to the scene out of the ground apparently, all other celebrating forgotten in this greater entertainment. The twins, in the shelter of mother's arms, stared too horror-struck even to scream.

But the gallant fire-ladders soon had the flames under control—the day being windless and the store-room being some yards from the house saved much danger in that direction. In the space of a few moments, the building was a drenched, charred image of itself, with a gaping hole in the north wall. The fire was out.

The fire-chief, who had come clanging up in his fire-buggy, walked through the respectfully divided crowd to inquire into the whyfores of the conflagration. Mrs. Howard excitedly explained.

"Gasolene?" inquired the great official thunderstruck. "Then why in the mischief wasn't there an explosion? Can must have been left open and let all the gas escape."

"No, sir, 'twasn't," Rosy put in, "I corked it tight, sir, when I put it back yesterday."

Further questioning elicited from the twins themselves the information that some time had elapsed after the uncorking process, owing to Bobba's errand after the punk and the subsequent difference of opinion.

"Mighty good thing, too," grunted the chief. "Saved an explosion and probably these youngsters' lives—it's the gas that accumulates and explodes—not the gasolene, as lots of folks think. For once, a kid-squabble was a good thing."

And he took his departure ringing his gong like mad as his big, black fire-horse galloped down the street.

"But kids keepin' out o' mischief is better still," declared Rosy, frowning mightily at the twins.

In the midst of the turmoil and excitement, Mrs. Howard had not noticed that she was scorched and burned all about the face and hands, from that first sheet of flame, though her two naughty darlings were quite safe with all their inflammable finery intact. But when the puffing engine was gone, and the crowd melted away, she came back to a realization of all that happened and the worst that had almost happened—then she quietly fainted away.

When, after Rosy's liberal application of water and smelling salts mamma came to herself again, she went to bed with a sick headache; the twins were also sent up to bed, though they hadn't fainted at all, and when papa came home—but why dwell on horrors any longer? I will draw a veil over the doubly painful scene that ensued and only add that always thereafter whenever Mrs. Howard found her children growing obstreperous, all she had to do was to brush back the soft, thick hair from her forehead and show a long, red scar that always stayed there and never went away.

"An' it never 'ploded, either, after all," said the twins, disconsolately.

THE PIPE AND THE SOAP-BUBBLE.

By KATHARINE PYLE.

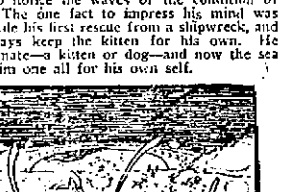

"I AM LITTLE," the soap-bubble said, "just now;
Oh, yes, I am small, I know";
(This is what it said to the penny pipe);
"But watch and see me grow.

"Now look! and reflected in me you'll see
The windows, the chairs, and door.
I'm a whole little world; did you ever know
Such a wonderful thing before?

"And only look at my colors bright,
Crimson and green and blue.
You could hardly hope such a lovely thing
Would ever stay here with you.

"And I feel so light!" the bubble cried:
"I am going now; good-by!
I shall float and float away from here,
Out under the shining sky;

"I shall float——" But, puff! the bubble broke.
The pipe near the nursery floor
Never looked nor spoke, but went on with its work,
And blew a great many more.

FREDDY'S FIRST RESCUE

By G. E. WALSH

FREDDY RAY was big for his age, wearing a seven-year suit on a six-year-old body. But he thought he was older, much older than he was, and big—well, wasn't he almost big as his father? At least he would be some day, and meanwhile he was growing!

The Ray family—father, mother, and Freddy, six years old, going on seven—lived on a rock in the middle of the ocean, or, at least, five miles from any other land. There was a tall light-house on the rock, and at the base of this white tower was a tiny house with five rooms. This house was home, the only home Freddy ever knew.

The lighting of the great lamp of the light-house had always been a great attraction to Freddy. One day, when his father carried him up, up the winding stairs and showed him how the lamp was lighted and how its rays spread far out over the tossing ocean, Freddy felt that his little world was the most wonderful that any boy could imagine. Think of the hundred steps up the tall tower and the magnificent view from the top!

But as time added another year to Freddy's age, his little mind soared to greater achievements. He was accustomed to storms and rough weather. He knew that his father often went out in his little boat to help strange people who drifted near the shoals. Sometimes he brought them back in his boat, half dead and so white! His mother then worked hard to give them warm clothing and hot things to drink and eat.

Freddy at first was content to watch and help; then he wanted to do more. He wanted to go with his father in the life-boat to pick up the shipwrecked people.

"Some day, lad, when you get bigger," his father answered this request.

After that Freddy asked every little while, "Am I big enough now to go with you in the boat, papa?"

"Not yet—not quite yet," had always been the response.

So Freddy had been forced to wait and grow. How he counted the days and looked at his figure in the glass to see if he was growing! When he first donned his seven-year suit he felt surely that he was almost big enough to help save ship-wrecked people.

As chance would have it, his opportunity did come a few days after this important event. There had been a storm at sea, not a very heavy storm, but one which made the sea pretty rough off the shoals. The day after the storm, the sun came up bright and warm. The sea was rolling in long swells.

Not a mile away from the light-house something was drifting heavily, swinging slowly up and down with the waves. A quick glance through the telescope showed that it was a dismantled sloop, a small coasting vessel abandoned by its crew.

Mr. Ray quickly got his boat in the water, and was preparing to go to the derelict when Freddy's lips faltered:

"Papa, I am big enough to go!"

There was a smile on the light-keeper's lips, and, after glancing up at the weather and down at the sea, he said:

"Yes, Freddy, you can go to-day. Jump in the stern."

Now there was no happier boy in all the world than Freddy Ray at that moment. He fairly tumbled down the steps and dropped snugly in the stern of the life-boat. His eyes were bright and glowing. Wasn't he going to a real wreck?

The row to the dismantled sloop was not a long or rough one, and Mr. Ray pulled so lustily at his oars that they were alongside in no time. When they reached the sloop Freddy gazed at it in awe. Would there be half-drowned people aboard, and would he be strong enough to help his father lift them into the life-boat?

"Now, boy, you stay quietly in the stern until I come back," cautioned his father.

He tied the boat to the stern of the sloop and then nimbly climed aboard. He was gone a long time, so long that Freddy got worried. What would he do if anything happened to his father? Could he row back to the lighthouse? What if another storm should come up and make the ocean very rough?

He was thinking of such dreadful things when Mr. Ray appeared above and shouted:

"Nobody aboard, Freddy. She's been deserted for a long time. We'll go back home now."

This announcement was not pleasing to our little mariner. What a disappointment to go to a shipwreck and then find nobody, and not even go aboard the wreck!

"But, papa, there might be somebody in—in—"

His father shook his head.

"No, lad, I've been everywhere."

Then, noting the disappointment on the little face, he added: "But if you want to come aboard and look I'll let you. I forgot this was your first skipwreck. Here, now hold fast to my hand and I'll pull you up."

Freddy climbed up, with his father's assistance, almost as easily as a veteran sailor. He stood on the deck of the old abandoned sloop in a moment. One glance showed him the awful desolation of the wave-swept craft. Mast, spars, sail and rigging were tumbled about in a confused mass, and part of the cargo of lumber was shifted over to one side.

"Be careful, little man, and hold tight to my hand," his father cautioned. "I'll take you to the cabin, and show you what an abandoned boat looks like."

Freddy seemed to come naturally into the use of his sea-legs. He did not lurch and roll with each toss of the boat, but walked steadily forward. When they came to the cabin, Mr. Ray threw open the door, and—

Suddenly both of them started. Something moved inside, and then there was a mild cry of some frightened animal. Out of the darkness a bundle of white appeared. It came directly toward Freddy and mewed.

"It's a pussy-cat, papa—a white pussy!"

Freddy took the frightened creature in his arms and stroked its soft fur. The kitten mewed and rubbed its nose in his face.

"Do you suppose he belongs to somebody, papa?" asked Freddy anxiously.

"It belongs to you, little man, if to any one. You rescued him, and I don't think anybody will take it away from you."

All the way back to the lighthouse home, Freddy held the kitten in his arms, and stroked and patted its head. In his affection for the shipwrecked cat he even forgot to notice the waves or the condition of the weather. The one fact to impress his mind was that he had made his first rescue from a shipwreck, and he would always keep the kitten for his own. He wanted a playmate—a kitten or dog—and now the sea had brought him one all for his own self.

"I'd like to go to an old fashioned picnic again this summer," Brightside announces with a note of sentimental yearning in his voice, as the cutecat of the Harlem that strolls languidly in.

"One word to Mother and she'll do the rest," replies Son, prying loose a cork tip from his cigarette case.

"It means a good deal of work for the women folks to prepare food for an outing," thoughtfully continues Father.

"The angel cake, pickles, stuffed olives and other near-food, the skirts tuck into a shoe box for the picnic eats will never give 'em heart failure from overwork," growls Son.

"When I was a boy," reminiscently remarks Father, "my mother always had fried chicken, three or four kinds of cold meat, half a dozen home-made pies and cakes and so many other things no one could begin to eat them all."

"Those happy days have gone by forever," pessimistically laments the First Born. "If a gink at one of these modern picnics can pry loose a couple of feather-weight sandwiches, a slab of store cheese and a bakery bun, he's pretty close to the limit."

"YOU CAN ALWAYS TAKE A STROLL AROUND THE GROUNDS."

"The home-cooked vituals were always the chief charm in the old style outing," says Father. "My mother would be busy over the cook stove for a week before the great event, baking and roasting the various good things."

"If you can find one little wife in any six room flat in Greater New York who won't lay her picnic supplies in the corner delicatessen store, a handsome reward will be paid and no questions asked," retorts Son.

"I fear the average city woman doesn't take the same delight in the wild-wood excursion that we used to," is Father's opinion.

"Nix on the homemade grub proposition for the dames in this little old town," agrees Son. "They can't see any fun in jamming a bunch of fifty-seven varieties of eats together, until they all taste alike, and carting it off ten or twenty miles by trolley. Then when the procession finds a vacant lot with three or four scraggly trees they camp out and unlimber the nour-food."

"It is a bit different from the wide, clover scented fields we usually selected for our rural festivities," admits Father.

"If you don't get an early start the best places are always taken and the bunch has to beat it to one of those cheap little beer gardens or a public park. If you happen to live in Brooklyn you can pick out a quiet spot in a new cemetery where a few lots are still on the market and picnic parties are welcome. Before you get through the ham sandwiches to the devilled eggs the agent comes around to show you bargains in choice burial plots where the view is extra fine."

"I don't think I should care for such mournful surroundings," ventures Father.

"When you get tired of reading the labels on the packages of patent biscuit, canned sardines and mixed pickles, you can always take a stroll around the grounds and read the mottoes on the tombstones," suggests Son. "If you eat enough of the picnic grub, and are there with the imagination, a guy ought to be able to think up a few neat inscriptions himself."

"I prefer to let my relatives prepare my memorial," declares Father.

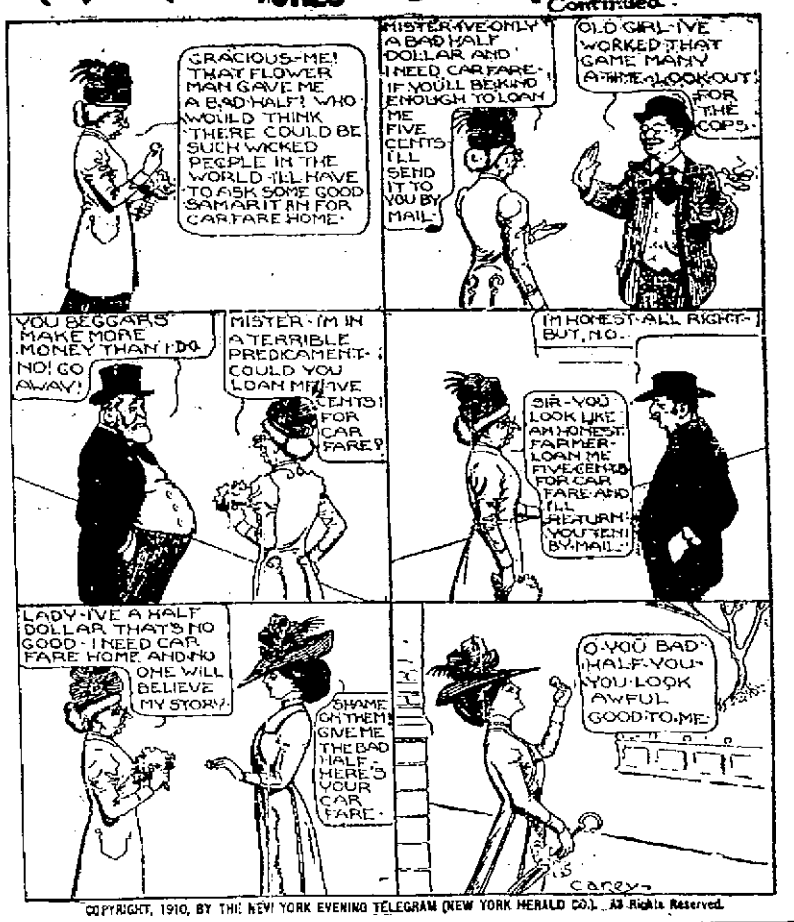

"Here's a very pretty little thing I made up out of my own head when I attended a 'cemetery picnic' last week," concludes Son:—

He didn't miss a picnic
In fifty-seven years,
'Till angel cake and mothballs
Let flow a widow's tears.

Returns To Cincinnati

O. O. Jackson and Raymond Fish, representatives of the Ohio Valley Exposition, who have been in Portsmouth for the past week, returned Friday to Cincinnati, where the Exposition is to be held. They were greatly pleased with the results of their work in Portsmouth.

A number of contracts have been closed with local firms for advertising in the Official Souvenir and it was stated by Mr. Jackson that between 15 and 20 pages would be devoted to Portsmouth.

Frank Wigham received five driving horses from northern Ohio Friday.

MRS. NELLIE GRANT SARTORIS.

When General U. S. Grant was President of the United States, in the early 70's, his daughter, Nellie Grant, shared her father's popularity and was one of the principal figures in the mind of the American public. Perhaps no American girl ever commanded more completely the homage of the nation than did Nellie Grant in those happy days of her girlhood, when she was known as "Little Sunshine of the White House."

Visitors from Maine to California, eager to shake hands with the President and express their admiration for him, met Nellie Grant also and basked in her smile. As the gatekeeper of the White House remarked, "Deed, Miss Nellie 'as' throws away smiles wherever she goes."

In 1874 the marriage of Nellie Grant to Captain Algernon Frederick Sartoris took place in the White House. Captain Sartoris was the son of a wealthy Englishman who owned property in Wisconsin. They came to this country in 1873, and Miss Grant, returning from Europe, met them on the steamer. She fell in love with him and after her marriage went to live in England.

The union was not a happy one, but Mrs. Sartoris found some consolation in her three lovely children and in the many friends she had made in England. After the death of Captain Sartoris his widow lived for a while in England, and her home, in No. 66 Cadogan place, London, was famous for its distinguished visitors.

But the daughter of the great American General was really living for her home country because irresistible that she returned at last, and comforted the remaining days of her widowed mother. She brought her children with her, and remained to be so thoroughly American that she applied to Congress for the restoration of her citizenship.

A bill to that effect introduced in Congress in 1898 made Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris and her three children citizens of the United States. Since that time Mrs. Sartoris has passed the greater part of her time in this country, where she is an interesting figure in New York and in Washington.

MRS. NELLIE GRANT SARTORIS.

Her son, Algernon Charles Sartoris, was an army officer and fought in the Spanish-American War. At one time he was Secretary of Legation at Guatemala.

Walsh Has Fast Mare

Joe Walsh, prominent young Otway school teacher was in the city Thursday and attended the Holy Redeemer commencement at the Grand last night as the guest of George McMahon.

Joe is the owner of a handsome and fast driving mare that is showing remarkable speed this spring and he has decided to register the nag with the National Racing Association, making the formal application to the secretary of the local association while here.

Shlooker

Mr. J. J. Corbett is willing to vouch for the honesty of Mr. Jeffries in the big fight and now if Mr. "Kid" McCoy will indorse Mr. Corbett and Mr. J. A. Johnson will raise his right hand the incident can be considered closed.

Suppose Mr. C. S. Rolls will come in for an awful larruping when Colonel Roosevelt notices that he aviated from England to France and back without permission.

Notice that customs officials have held up $1,000,000 worth of Panama hats. The gods forbid that anything should have induced them to stay the release of any rain coats, plush caps or fur lined garments.

Glad to learn the Kaiser's hand is well again and he has resumed signing checks. Next time the War Lord meets Colonel Roosevelt he will probably wear both mitts in a sling and give his visitor the glad hand in the sign language.

See that high government officials present alibis as to the leak of information touching railroad legislation. Seems rather bad form. Qui s'excuse s'accuse.

Retired Long Island farmer commenced his ninety-first year of life with his usual four-mile walk and says by exercise and strict adherence to the simple life he expects to see one hundred or more. The yeoman's simple life, it may be remarked includes smoking, chewing tobacco and taking a drink when he feels like it.

Al Moayak, a moderate newspaper published in Cairo, denounces Colonel Roosevelt, among other things, as "a blood-thirsty butcher." Oh, nonsense. Can't stand for that. Why, in the Colonel's own book, telling how he fought the Spanish War, he says he only killed one man, shooting him in the back, and that might have been an accident. Firing in the air to scare him or something like that, perhaps.

The Federal Health bill, or Doctors' Trust, proposes among other things to regulate industrial hygiene, run the Pension Office, supervise the testing of structural steel, chase the bookworm, boss the Bureaus of Chemistry and Health and the Marine Hospitals, control the departments of Commerce and Labor and Agriculture, and arrange "the co-ordination of similar activities," whatever that is. It would be a bigger thing than the police system and a man wouldn't be able to pare his corns without a permit.

Jests For the Leafy Month of June

AN ESCAPE FROM SQUALLS.

Wife (time, midnight)—That you, John Henry?

J. H.—No. It's a kidnaper in disguise. Chuck the kid in the closet. (To himself)—I reckon I'll get some sleep when I crawl in.

SEEMED SO TO HER.

Gerald—An orange tree has been known to produce 15,000 fruit at one crop.

Geraldine—Lemon trees seem to be even more productive.

HIGH TIME.

Sunday Editor—Come to think of it, what's Luther Burbank been doing lately?

Assistant—Probably trying to produce a ham tree.

"CHAMPEEN" OF THE WEDDING.

"Mike, you were at the O'Flanegan wedding. Who was the best man?"

"Dinnis O'Toole. I seen dat felly wallop t'ree iv th' biggest chaps in the room afore th' pilsiatries was over."

ONE THING NECESSARY.

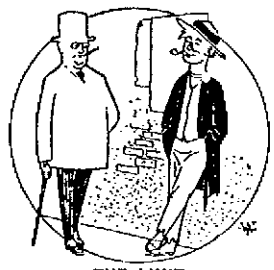

Tenreck—That fellow Gayboy has no conscience. He is quite capable of trying to kiss your wife.

Henpeck—Then he must make up in courage what he lacks in conscience.

CASH AND CREDIT.

"Father, what is meant by bankruptcy?"

"Bankruptcy is when you put your money in your hip pocket and let your creditors take your coat."

THE LIMIT.

"Suppose you had a dollar, Dusty. What would you do with it?"

"Say, boss, you couldn't s'pose it wuz a fiver, could you?"

STILL SHE WAS AFRAID.

Daughter—Papa, you don't know how bashful Freddie is when he calls.

Papa—Don't worry, daughter. Call on me and I will help him out.

THERE ARE OTHERS.

Mrs. Nearby—What is your husband's pursuit in life?

Mrs. Outotown—The 7:45 train.

RAILROAD EXPERTS.

First Thespian: "Yes, Montague, a Chicago millionaire has so many ties that his valet can't count 'em."
Second Thespian: "He ought to hire us."

UP TO DATE IN FROGHURST.

FLUCTUATING DEAFNESS.

Mrs. Popleigh: "John is the soundest sleeper I ever saw. Here this child has been crying at the top of its lungs for the last hour, and he has never moved."

Mr. Popleigh (some time later): "Confound it, Mary, you left this watch out on the dressing case, and its ticking woke me up. I wish you would be more careful. You know how easily I am awakened!"

SLIGHTLY PERSONAL.

Slender Individual—Did I understand you to say, sir, that you get out at the next station?

Stout Party—Yes, I did, sir, and what of it?

Slender Individual (with great relief)—Ah-h-h! The train'll be getting on faster after that.

THE MAN WHO STAYED.

Lecturer (after his stunt)—Now I shall be glad to answer any questions.

Man In the Front Row—What time is it?

MOTOR MANIA.

"Just look at those two motors hitched on to each other."

"Yes. They belong to the rich banker Wagner, who used to drive a four-in-hand."

SHOW FOR OTHERS.

Muriel—I think, aunty, we had better move to another hotel.

Aunty—Why, Muriel, I thought we were so comfortable here.

Muriel—I know, but these people have seen all my dresses.

COULDN'T THINK OF IT.

"Dey ast me to look troo de winder ter see 'em eatin'."

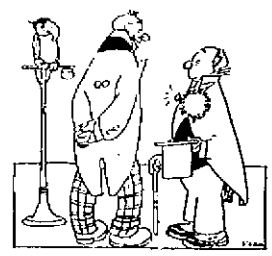

"And did ye?"

"Nope. I wuz afraid it would make me mout' water."

THE FAMILY PEW.

Ma goes to church to show her hat,
And Sis goes there to goo.
Pa goes along for looks, he says—
And me? Because I have to.

THE NOISELESS KIND.

"Yes; we think a good deal of that parrot. I wouldn't take $100 for him."

"Well, he isn't very handsome, but I suppose he's a good talker."

"No; he can't talk."

CHARGED FOR CURIOSITY.

Mr. Bach—What is the reason you charge twice as much for my cuffs as you did formerly.

Laundress—Because you have begun making pencil notes on them.

"What difference does that make?"

"The girls waste so much time in trying to make them out."

VERY LIKELY.

Constable (to motorist who has exceeded the speed limit)—And I have my doubts about this being your first offence. Your face seems familiar to me.

FREQUENT BITES.

The Barmaid—Your dog is getting very fat. What do you feed him on, Mr. McPherson?

McPherson—Oh, I dinna gie him any regular meals. Just whenever I drop in for a drink he gets a biscuit.

SURE PROOF.

Borrow—Do you believe in the transmigration of souls?

Lende—Certainly. I must have been an ass when I lent you that $10.

INSIDE INFORMATION.

Old Lady—Well, my boy, and what do you want?

Boy—I've called for the reward of a dollar wot you offered for the return of your canary.

Old Lady—But that is a cat you have there!

Boy—Yes, I know, mum, but the canary's inside of 'im.

A SLAM OF STRIFE.

Let us, then, be up and doing
Everybody that we meet—
Only stay down in the rush hour
When a woman wants a seat.

HIS FATHER'S EXAMPLE.

Slum Worker—What a well behaved little boy he is!

Burglar's Wife—And he comes by it natural, ma'am. His poor father always got his sentence reduced owin' to good behavior.

SURE THING.

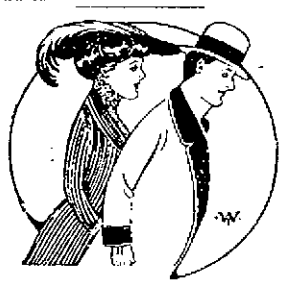

Caller—Is Mrs. Brown at home?

Artless Parlor Maid (bustling confidentially)—No, ma'am; she really is out this afternoon.

THE DACHSHUND.

The Critic—I don't call 'im good tempered or he'd wag his tail when I pat his head.

The Professor—Und so he will presently, when der idea has had time to travel.

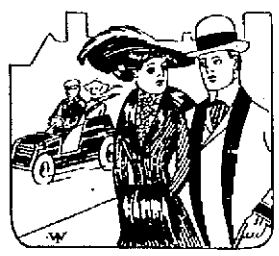

IT MADE AN IMPRESSION.

"It was a fine wedding."

"Were you struck with the bride?"

"No; with an old shoe."

QUITE NATURAL.

"How did that girl ever come to marry her chauffeur?"

"He drove her to it."

MODERN ARRANGEMENT.

"How comes it we never see your husband at the race track now?"

"We have two children now. They take up his time."

HIS BUSINESS.

Traveler (in a railway coach to fellow passenger)—Sir, what do you mean? This is the third time you have put out my match.

Fellow Traveler—Force of habit. I'm a member of a volunteer fire brigade.

MUCH MORE IMPORTANT.

Little Bessie—Mamma, how'll I know when I'm naughty?

Mother—Your conscience will tell you, dear.

Little Bessie—I don't care about what it tells me. Will it tell you?

NO FAVORITES.

"A dear little girl your daughter is. She always has something to say to me when I meet her."

"Oh, yes, she's not a bit proud. She speaks to every one."

HALF AND HALF.

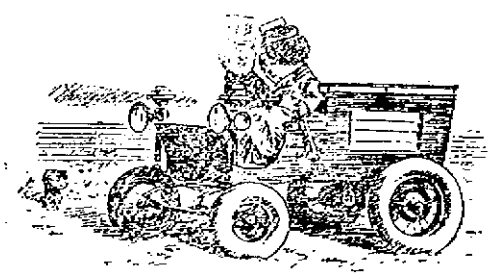

"I don't understand you, Linda. One day you're bright and jolly and the next depressed and sad."

"Well, I'm in half mourning, that's why."

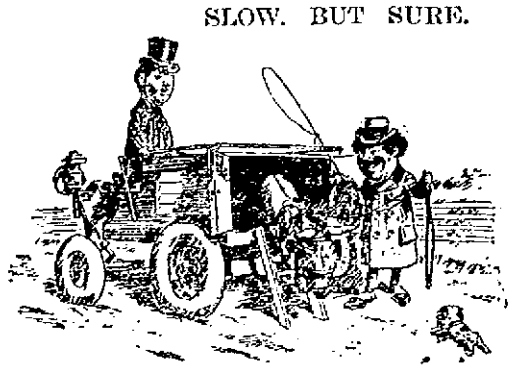

LINGO OF THE STUDIO.

Artist to Friend—Yes; I use the palette knife a good deal. Knocked a child's head off in the morning and sold it in the afternoon. (Nervous old gentleman gets out hurriedly at next stop.)

SLOW, BUT SURE.

"It's run down. I'll get out the auxiliary motor."

"Come along, Jenny!"

"It may be slow, but we'll get home."

ALIKE BUT DIFFERENT.

It is not unusual to compare a child to a plant. This is a good simile, but it does not carry out to the end. Both will ordinarily grow as they are trained. As an exotic a plant may sometimes defy all laws of the vegetable life and unfold into rarest beauty, so also may the child, surrounded by the hardest and most adverse conditions develop into splendid manhood. Neither, however, is the rule, but the striking exception. The plant must be cared for, it must be supported, pruned, watered and guarded against pests. So must the child be nurtured, trained and taught. He must be cultured by precept and sustained by example. The similarity ends when we come to think the plant is senseless and helpless, unable to do anything for itself and pining and perishing as soon as the tendering hand is withdrawn from it. But the child must be trained to sustain itself and walk alone. That is where so like the plant it becomes so different. Somehow it has come that upon the mother is thrown not the greater responsibility, for the decrees of nature and nature's God can never be changed, but the greater work of rearing the child. To her credit, be it said, she is as a rule faithful to her responsibility and her heavier task. If she fail so often thereat it is not because she is unwise and unequal to her duty, but because she is not properly supported by the father. He is frequently more than indifferent and negligent, he is actually hostile. He goes further than failing to support the care and teachings of the mother, he refuses to correct and he sets bad example. It is one of the laws of nature, not at all mysterious, that the child loves the mother before the father, it is a mystery that it is most prone to follow in the ways of the father. From this comes actually the heavier responsibility of the latter. Direction from him lights further the way, but in is his example that is most effectual in help to the end. Therefore doth it behoove him most to give the right example. Turned loose in the world to travel his own path the child will find it beset with much of darkness and pitfall, and his best beacon light there along will be the integrity, the sobriety and the honor taught, but most of all shown him by a wise and faithful father.

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Honor and shame from no condition rise, act well your part, there all the honor lies.

It is hoped Napoleon Bonaparte Broward knows that bit of rhyme and lives us to it. Once a roustabout on a steamboat, he is now possesses the high honor of being the Democratic nominee in Florida for United States senator and that means his election. The people believe he lives up to the injunction of that rhyme and that is why they so favored him. They did it under great stress and obstacle too because his opponent was the present Senator Taliaferrario—pronounced Tolliver—who spent the well nigh incredible sum of a quarter of a million dollars to elect himself, while Broward, who has already risen to the governorship had no more means than were necessary to defray his traveling expenses. It is said he did not spend a cent for votes or organization. It is a proud thought that we live in a country, where opportunity is free and open to all, where worth and ability give wing to ambition to soar it from the lowliest to the highest place, but greater yet is the honor, that though money is so powerful it can not always buy the voters. We boast the voice of the people is supreme, but it shows itself so only when the people refuse to be corrupted and bought.

LET THE DAY STAND.

Some of the state commanders of the Grand Army are calling for the abandonment of Memorial day, or else the shifting of its observance to Sunday. They suggest this because the celebration has largely been turned into a holiday devoted to recreation and amusements, rather than the keeping alive of patriotic deeds and services. Surely, this general perversion of it must sadden the veterans, whose march to the grave goes faster each time the day comes 'round, but that is not sufficient cause for its abandonment. There is always a shadow following the sun, always the bad with the good. Why the war itself, out of the sacrifices and glories of which sprang Decoration day, saw the nation and the people split in twain. Had there been no different way of thinking, no different way of acting there would have been no war and no Decoration day. Then let the day stand. The many may forget, but the few will not and they will keep alive tradition, which is a country's best and most solid mainstay. And let not the veterans grieve that they and their comrades are forgot. It is more than a generation since the war ended and that is a long, long way back to those born since, born with new thought and new task to confront, but still they remember, they are only hurried and indifferently seeming because they do not think. They hear and will recall whenever real occasion comes.

A rounder is not a good citizen. This is on the square.

FROM ONE TO ANOTHER.

Descanting on the beautiful and proud thing the high school building is going to be to Portsmouth a citizen wound up with the climax, that it would cause the early building of a new court house. We hope he is not overdrawing its effect, though we are sadly inclined to believe he is. We can hold no other conviction that a new court house for Scioto county is a thing held far back in the womb of the future. This is not disputing this ought not to be the case, it just simply is. No other county in the state has such a disreputable and inadequate structure in which to transact its own business. The march of progress has left it a half century behind, it has no safeguards for the valuable records stored therein and growing more valuable with every passing month; it has not either decent or sufficient accommodations for the public officials and only this week quarters for the board of review had to be secured down town. All this stands admitted, but it does not build a court house. It will take bonds, a huge bulk of them to do that. The bonds will have to be voted before they can be issued and there is no substantial ground for so much as hope that the people are in the frame of mind to vote them. It may appear a trifle contradictory to hold such a view, when the city but recently voted overwhelmingly over two hundred thousand dollars to tear down a much better high school, considering its uses, than the present court house, considering its uses, to build a more modern and complete structure. This is explained, however, in the fact that the people realize the growth and importance of Portsmouth, are proud of it and so willing public improvements shall keep pace with that growth and importance, while they have not yet come to a distinct conviction that this progress actually belongs to the county as well as to the city. When that gets impressed into the public mind then, and not before, we may look to the coming of a new court house, an end to which the new high school will undoubtedly contribute somewhat.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE IRISH.

A writer in Frank Leslie's pays the glowing tribute to the Irish race and every Irish we know will admit its entire truthfulness and be even a trifle surprised there is not more of it:

I like an Irishman because he never ceases to be an Irishman. I know some other people who cease to be a lot of things, and sometimes without any visible regret on the faces of their neighbors. I have never known of an Irishman who objected to how much somebody else had if he had enough. I have never known of an Irishman, however much he had, who would not divide with a human being whom he loved and who had less than he had.

An Irishman never gives the power of attorney. An Irishman is never diffident, because he is born with a degree of confidence in himself and his extraction, which is clear, comprehensive and all-embracing. I never knew an Irishman that would not help somebody in distress, and I have met many of them that would distress people, too. There is no climate or country in the world that can destroy the good spirits of an Irishman. Irishmen have said more in short sentences than most people have narrated in books.

There is no need of passing much time in describing the Irish. They admit it. There is no need of telling a man he is great when that is his first instinct. There is no need of telling a man what he has done when he did it first and did it intentionally. But the Irish race has stirred more emotions in the human breast than any other race that walks the earth. They have been broader and narrower. They have been more generous and more selfish. They have gone through the gamut of human experience, and they have never surrendered their personality. You can persuade an Irishman to do something, but you cannot make him. The only subject I have ever heard them agree on was Ireland and the Irish, and on that they are a unit. They are not always strong in aggression, but when they are on the defense you cannot tell how many of them there are, because they only look like one.

SHOULD PLAY NO FAVORITES.

Colonel Roosevelt repudiates the suggestion, that he should be shown favor and his baggage and that of his party besides be allowed to pass through the customs house without examination by the federal revenue officials when he returns from abroad. Whether that suggestion came from official source or from one of bad disposition, ever ready to crook the pregnant hinges of the knee, in order that thrift may follow fawning does not appear so far. Whatever quarter it came from, however, it is unworthy and in spurning any profit that might come from it Colonel Roosevelt's habitual precipitancy does him more credit than is usual with it. No matter what measure may be taken of him in popular judgment, he is after all but a citizen of these United States, no more entitled to the favor of government, or exception of the law than the lowliest and least known. Few citizens have been as emphatically diligent as he in exhorting to observance and enforcement of the law and all his words would be set at naught if he accepted exemption therefrom. Higher than that, though, lies the obligation of the law to prove itself. It is written not for a part, nor yet for the many, but for all. Its vitality and worth lies in the sole fact that it is universally inclusive. When it goes to writing exceptions as to individuals it writes its own doom.

A country exchange says, "Mr. Silas Jenkins is enjoying a visit from his mother-in-law." For Mr. Jenkins' sake we hope it is true.

WHY HE FELL SO FAR.

People in Illinois are wide agap over the fall of Senator Daniel Holtslaw of Marion county, a self-confessed grafter. Senator Holtslaw is the richest man in his county, he is president and principal stockholder in three banks and owns thousands of rich broad acres. He is, or was exceedingly active in Sunday school work and not infrequently did a little preaching. His repute as an honest, honorable business was firmly entrenched. Yet, according to his own confession again he was one of the most greedy and bold boodlers about Springfield, where boodling was as common as the meeting of the legislature. Overwhelmed at his disgrace he has resigned his seat in the senate and piteously moans he does not know why he fell. But his son does. This lad says it is all owing to the corrosion of politics. That is it. The politicians saw rich pickings in "the old man" and they induced him to run for office. They assessed his campaign contributions according to the size of his pocketbook and not on the basis of legitimacy and the salary. They introduced him to the black art of buying votes and gradually he came to look upon votes as a chattel to be trafficked in, to be bought and sold as any other commodity. Thus you see the workings of the process of corrosion. His finer sensibilities were quite imperceptibly eaten into and his whole structure of integrity and honor was finally undermined and eventually he became that most despicable of mortals, an unconscionable grafter.

THE JUDGMENT AGAINST REASON.

In the District of Columbia it seems exist separate schools for the races and this fact was the basis for a peculiar decision rendered by a court therein. The parents of a certain pupil sought by suit in injunction to prevent the principal of a white school from excluding her therefrom. The proof showing the child was either one-eighth, or one-sixteenth negro, the court ruled the injunction should not be granted. Had the court stopped there its judgment would have been held consonant with sound reason, but unfortunately to its credit it did not, declaring the actual strain of negro blood in the child was of no consequence. Its father was a negro admittedly, having one-half negro blood in his veins and the child would follow the race of its father. There is neither reason nor logic in that. Were it so there could be no mixture of blood, no such things as half breeds. We know, however, such are both in acceptance and fact. The offspring of an Irish father and a French mother, is not an Irishman, but an Irish-Frenchman. If the offspring married a French woman the progeny would be one-quarter Irish and three-quarter French. Were such intermarriages made unto the fourth generation the Irish strain would be entirely lost sight of and the descendants would to all intents and purposes be French. There would be no claim that they took the lesser strain of blood in the veins of their sires. A different rule seemingly applies to the negro in this country only because the curse of his historic bondage is still upon his race.

WELL, DID YOU EVER.

There is one small city, which appears to be actually determined to put a maximum at which automobiles may speed its thoroughfares. This city is Roanoke, out on the Norfolk and Western and it actually arrested "one of our most prominent citizens" and fined him for exceeding that maximum. It strains credulity to state it, but it is a fact, with the records to show it. The action is no more surprising to the outside world than it was to Roanoke. The inhabitants of the latter place, like those of others had heard divers and sundry proclamation from the authorities that they were going to put the clamps down on the speeders, so often, that to mention the subject was to laugh. But the worm will turn and hence the sad and unexpected fate of the forlorn prominent citizen. Having done that much Roanoke proposes to do more. She has supplied her finest with stop-watches and instructions to time every car that seems to be violating the ordinance in such cases made and provided and when so found to forthwith and immediately hail the chauffeur, male or female, before his honor. That gives us a measure of hope—hope that there will be one other town doing the surprising thing and some day this veracious chronicler of current events will be able to bring to its large and enlarging constituency the glad tidings, that hereafter no longer forever are some principal highways to be commonly used as speedways.

AN UNIQUE DISTINCTION.

Recalling a cyclone, which wrought destruction and death in Mt. Carmel, Illinois, thirty-three years and two weeks ago this Saturday, Mrs. Anna Jordan, of that town, claims she had the most remarkable escape from death ever experienced by a human being. She relates that when the storm came on, she, then Anna Eisenhart, was at school with a number of other children, her class room being on the ground floor. The wind cut the building in two right at the ground, picked her up and carried her over the steeple of the Methodist church, deposited her in a vacant lot, two blocks away, and all done so gently that she was absolutely uninjured, except a slight scratch on her ankle, which was sustained when she brushed the church steeple in passing. It was a remarkable escape, but no more rare exhibit of the freaks, which the winds sometimes play, than the fact that during this same storm green blades of grass were driven straight into trees as though they were nails beaten with hammer. Still no one will envy the experience of the woman, or desire to take chances with the like. To know some one has passed safely through it is satisfaction enough.

INJUSTICE SERVES WELL.

Out in Nebraska the newspapers are having their say about the supreme court because that august tribunal has decided unanimously, that under the statelaw it is unlawful for any railroad to contract for advertising to be paid for in transportation. The decision may trench upon the inalienable rights of the individual to make such contract in manner as he pleases, but it is good policy and good business for the papers, whether they would have it that way or not. It should be borne in mind likewise, that as the state creates corporations it has rights therewith also and in reason one of these rights is to say within bounds what agreements the corporation may and may not enter into. Possibly, a loss here and there may have occurred to a newspaper by forbidding it to accept transportation in pay for its advertising space, but on the whole the press has been the gainer. It gained in public esteem. Bartering space for transportation was a fair exchange and a mere business matter, but the great American public would not look at it that way. It persisted in holding at the editor, who took his seat in a railway coach as a dead head, rather worse than that it regarded him as a deadhead all the time because he did not have to plank down the cash whenever he wanted to travel abroad. The editor lost directly on the deal, because having the transportation he left his business and went away, spending money and time when there was no call for him to do so. He of Nebraska ought to be thanking both the stars and the court for placing him in position where he must demand and receive cash for his space to the increase of his pocketbook and the elevation of his stature in the community.

And What We Think of the Things Others Think.

Women's hats may yet be sold at so much a front foot.

There is no froth or foam on the temperance wave.

Halley's comet has gone on another swing around the circle.

Automobilists are traveling the pace that kills—pedestrians.

So far Roosevelt hasn't called a single European monarch a liar.

Things naturally look dark to the man whose eye has been blacked.

Inconsistent as it may seem some men are easily "sold" that could not be "bought" at any price.

It is well to be charitable with the wearers of decolette gowns—for charity will cover a great deal.

The man who never does anything for his fellow man will not be missed when he shuffles off this mortal coil.

A man with a shady reputation doesn't enjoy much of the sunshine of life.

The young man who does not improve his mind in youth will spend his old age in the intellectual alms house.

We don't care what's at the top of Mount McKinley, but we would like to know what's at the bottom of the high cost of living.

You often lose more by the friends you allow yourself to associate with than by the enemies who put you on your mettle.

Some men "set" around all day and all they hatch is a story to tell their wives about laying the foundations for the future.

Miss Margery Chester, a petite North Dakota maiden, has married a man by the name of Umpgazingazowskinski. Love will do most anything.

The figures secured by the recent census will be given out soon, but we can reassure the ladies that their ages will be given by average and not individually.

If the people who pack the berries we buy should make a mistake sometime and turn the box upside down when filling, we would come pretty near getting full measure.

Five or six elephants got loose at Danville, Ill., a short time ago and went to insurging up and down the streets. As Uncle Joe and the rules committee were still at Washington the affair passed off rather tamely.

A man who was sent to the insane asylum because he insisted there were twenty in his family, while the court found there was only he and his wife, may have figured that his wife was 2 and he was the 0.

A Pittsburg hen has laid a five-yolk egg. Someone has to do something to keep up the reputation of the old town—but say, if that egg should ever become overripe the graft exposure smell would never be noticed.

Some well-to-do philanthropists, with much commendable concern for the common people, have elucidated, after much investigation, a theory that if we substitute rump roasts for high-priced steaks on our bill-of-fare, the price of beef will decline. This is at least getting behind the meat question.

Halley's comet has been traveling through space for countless centuries at a rate that makes us dizzy to contemplate. As far as we know it has never come in contact with any other celestial body. If there is a power above with sufficient wisdom to have started this immense body going ages ago at just the right momentum to cause it to cross the earth's orbit in 1910 at a point, which, at the pace the comet travels, might be called just barely missing us, how can we doubt the power of this being to give us everlasting life or to take away at pleasure the breath of life that gives animation to this tenement of clay.
